VISITORS FALLING OFF.

Not So Many Arrivals at Chicago Hotels.

A RUSH NOT EXPECTED UNTIL JUNE

The Duke of Veragua and Party Calls on Mayor Harrison, Interrupting the Officeseekers—The Paderewski Squabble Practically Settled in His Favor.

CHICAGO, May 3.—There is considerable falling off in hotel arrivals and the names of nabobs are not as conspicuous on the registers as on the days previous. Notwithstanding this the leading downtown hotels are full, very few of the visitors who came to witness the opening of the fair having left. Hotelmen do not expect a steady influx of World's fair visitors before June.

The Duke of Veragua and his party called on Mayor Harrison to pay a formal visit of respect. There was a howling mob of Democratic patriots in the Mayor's ante-room, but these gentlemen were not assembled to do honor to the Spanish visitors. On the contrary they were clamoring for situations in the water, street and other departments of the city government. When the mayor's secretary was apprised of the approach of the duke and his brother, he tried to have the sturdy patriots vacate the ante-room, but his pleadings were of no avail.

"Be jabers," said one statesman from the First ward, "oim as good as any jook on earth. Its a job in the strate departmint oim afther, and oill not lave the place till oi see Carther."

The patriots had to wait until the duke and his brother had made their call, however.

The council of administration has decided that soloists can use their own pianos, instead of those of exhibitors, if they wish. This practically settles the Paderewski squabble.

When the board of lady managers assembled in the woman's building for their regular meeting there was a jolly row growing out of the dedication ceremonies. Many of the ladies are intensely angry with the ceremonies committee on account of what they are pleased to call an unpardonable slight, and unless the wise heads prevail the whole matter will be officially brought before the board in the form of a vigorous protest which will probably make trouble. The dissatisfied ladies accuse the ceremonies committee and Mrs. Mary Logan, as well as the president of the board in particular, with assuming to run the woman's department entirely to the exclusion of the other ladies interested. The ladies base their complaint on the fact that none but the favored few met Duchess Veragua. No one of the other commissioners was presented, it is alleged, and it is said Mrs. Logan took it upon herself to entertain the distinguished guest.

The real trouble in the board of lady managers, however, dates back to the days of Phœbe Couzens. The faction that supported her has grown largely and is not slow in declaring that certain members of the board are doing all the work, while others are taking all the honor.

Attendance at the Fair.

CHICAGO, May 3. — Superintendent Tucker of the department of admissions, gave out the official statement that the attendance at the fair, as near as he could ascertain, was 315,000. "The methods of getting at the number of tickets used by 'dead heads' are very crude," said he. "There were no turnstiles to aid us. I have put down the number of free admissions at 140,000, leaving the number who paid at 175,000. This I consider a conservative estimate."

To Dedicate the Pennsylvania Building.

CHICAGO, May 3.—The dedication of the Pennsylvania building will take place probably in July, on a day set apart by joint action of the state board and exposition officials as Pennsylvania day. The general desire is to make it July 4, the same as Pennsylvania day at the Centennial.

Booth's Condition Unchanged.

NEW YORK, May 3.—It is said at the Players' club that Edwin Booth's condition had not changed.

Weather Forecast.

Fair: westerly winds.

REFUSING HEBREWS PASSPORTS.

A Russian Consul Won't Grant Them to United States Citizens.

NEW YORK, May 3.—The Russian Consul General Olarovsky has declined to place his signature upon a passport issued by the state department and presented by Mrs. Sadie Schwartz of this city the wife of a citizen of the United States, on the ground that she was a Hebrew and that the laws of his country forbid him signing such a passport.

A newspaper claims to have sent a reporter to the consul general with a passport to be signed and states that the consul refused to put his signature to it when, in reply to a question, the reporter said he was a Hebrew.

Unconscious For Nineteen Days.

ORANGE, N. J., May 3.—One of the most remarkable cases ever known to New Jersey pathologists is that of Miss Mary McCann, a young woman who fell from a South Orange street car, and has since lain on a bed in the Orange Memorial hospital in a state of coma and without regaining consciousness. During her 19 days of unconsciousness the young woman has been under the constant surveillance and treatment of two physicians, and has been examined by a number of specialists, but nothing can be done to bring her out of the comatose condition.

Will Await the Test.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Orders have been issued to treasury officers, special agents, internal revenue agents and others not to arrest unregistered China men after May 5. On that date the Geary law provides that all unregistered Chinese in the United States may be arrested. As the constitutionality of the Geary act will be tested before the supreme court on May 10, it has been decided to await a decision before ordering wholesale arrests.

The Judge Getting Strict.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., May 3.—Judge Hazen has flatly refused to grant licenses held under advisement, and announces that he will reconsider no case. He instructed the county detective to rid the city of all club rooms and gambling houses.

The Populists Are Winners.

TOPEKA, May 3.—The supreme court has ousted Railroad Commissioners Mitchell and Anthony, who refused to turn over their offices to the Populists, claiming they had been elected for three years and the governor could not remove them.

A Paper Mill Destroyed.

GREENSBURG, Pa., May 3. — Later news from the storm is to the effect that the large paper mill of Smith Bros., at Smithton, was demolished. The company store was unroofed. The loss will not be far from $5,000. An orchard in the same vicinity was destroyed.

Gompers and Boycotted Beer.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Sam Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, came in for some hard knocks at the meeting of the Central Labor union, being charged with drinking Ehret's boycotted beer.

Washington Chinamen Registering.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Fourteen of the 130 Chinamen in this city have registered and it is expected most of the others will do so between now and Friday next, the last day under the Geary exclusion act.

Spanish Vessels Sail.

NEW YORK, May 3.—The Spanish flagship Infanta Isabel, with the Nueva Espana in her wake, have sailed for Havana. These are the first of the visitors to go and the others will, one by one, pick up their anchors and turn their noses toward the narrows. The Infanta Isabel, with the sick admiral on board, will go directly to Cuba to escort the Spanish Princess Infanta Eulahe to New York on her way to the World's fair.

Smallpox in Ontario.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., May 3.—There are six new cases of smallpox reported among the 79 European immigrants quarantined near West Fort William. The people of Fort William have set up a "dead line" between the cars and "shacks" of the smallpox patients and the town and refuse to allow even the physician who is attending the sufferers to pass it.

Charged With Stealing Harness.

PITTSBURG, May 3.—Samuel Paul, who is wanted in Latrobe for larceny of a harness, is in the Twenty-eighth ward police station awaiting transportation. He was arrested some time ago by Chief Cannon of Latrobe, and asked to visit his wife at 607 Carson street, before going over the mountain. While the wife entertained the officer he got away.

Linemen on a Strike.

BROOKLYN, May 3.—The linemen employed by the New York and New Jersey Telephone company, numbering 35, have gone out on a strike because their demand for $3 a day was not granted. The trolley linemen employed on the Brooklyn City railroad line have notified the president of the company that they want $3 a day.

The Reading Making Money.

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—The statement of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad company, for the month of March, 1893, shows a profit for the month of $846,340. The surplus for the month is $196,340. The surplus for March, 1892, was $112,943.

A Break Feared.

SPRINGFIELD, O., May 3.—Never before in the history of the Lewistown reservoir north of here were its waters so high as now. Never before did danger seem so imminent. It is the second largest artificial body of water in the world, and a break is feared.

A Girl Still Missing.

CINCINNATI, May 3.—The police have found no trace of Philomena Durstin, the 17-year-old girl who was reported missing. She came here two weeks ago from Sidney, O.

Danger Over at Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, May 3.—The heavy rains have ceased and the dangers of a disastrous flood has passed.

GAS AND OIL STRIKE.

The New Field Located Near the City of Pittsburg.

STRUCK IT IN THE THIRD SAND.

The Territory May Take Front Rank as an Oil-Producing Territory—The Monotony of Field Development Has Been Broken at Last.

PITTSBURG, May 3.—The monotony that has long prevailed in field developments was broken by the Forest Oil company drilling in a wildcat right here at home in this county. The indications are the most promising of any third sand discovery since the Wildwood field was defined. The well is located on the Horrison farm in the northeast corner of Harrison township, and about midway between Tarentum and Sharpsburg, and two miles north and a little west of the town of Springdale, on the West Penn railroad.

This venture was located and drilled for gas, with a view to catching a north extension to the Milltown gasfield. The well was drilled two bits into the third sand and began to gas and fill up with fluid. It was then shut down that the boiler could be moved back and connections made. The sand is of an excellent quality, and if the present indications count for anything this well will prove the most important find that has been brought to notice for many months. There is a scope of territory four miles wide, running east and west, that has never been tested. Some years ago a well was drilled on the Roberts farm, two miles to the west, and more recently a well was drilled on the Yute farm, two miles to the east. A little gas was found in each of these wells.

No Flood Disaster Feared.

ST. LOUIS, May 3.—The Mississippi river is still rising slowly at this point, but it is believed it will soon recede. After a careful study of reports sent in by government observers and others Local Observer W. H. Hallon says the Mississippi at St. Louis has about reached its crest.

One Woman Killed.

TOLEDO, May 3.—The Odd Fellows and Daughters of Rebekah chartered a special car on the Consolidated Street railroad to attend the funeral of Mrs. Hiram Berry, one of the members. When returning from the cemetery the car got between two tracks of the Lake Shore road, and presently a train came thundering along. The women became greatly excited. Mrs. M. J. Boork jumped off immediately in front of the passing train and her legs were cut off and she was otherwise mangled. She died in a few minutes. Other ladies also jumped from the car and were more or less injured.

Caused a Sensation.

WASHINGTON C. H., O., May 3.—The arrest of Girard Pavey of Green township, this county, on the charge of assaulting his wife with intent to kill, created considerable surprise throughout this neighborhood, as he is a farmer of some means. Mrs. Pavey charges the most brutal treatment against her husband, alleging that after knocking her down with his fist he kicked her until she was almost dead and threatened to knock her brains out with a chair, which he brandished about her head. The accused was bound over to court by 'Squire Cheney in the sum of $500.

St. Andrew's Officers.

COLUMBUS, O., May 3.—The Episcopal Brotherhood of St. Andrew, at its annual convention, elected officers for the ensuing year, as follows: President, W. G. Mathers, Columbus; first vice president, Colonel J. W. Anderson, Cincinnati; second vice president, Dudley Moore, Toledo; secretary, W. E. P. Love, Columbus; assistant secretary, Harry St. Clair Hathaway, Cleveland; executive committee, W. W. Williams and J. H. Miller, Cleveland; Frank S. Wayne and W. B. Brockway, Toledo; W. W. Meyers and W. M. Allen, Cincinnati: W. G. Benham and Dr. A. A. Thoman, Columbus.

Appointed to Two Positions.

COLUMBUS, O., May 3.—State Food and Dairy Commissioner McNeal has appointed George R. Beaton of New Carlisle, Clark county, as clerk in his department at an annual salary of $1,200. The governor has appointed Paul Augustus, colored, of Kenton, Hardin county, as messenger in the executive chamber, to succeed Milton Green of Stark county, who was recently removed.

An Austrian Forger Caught.

CINCINNATI, May 3.—Jacques Bicco Adutt, the Austrian forger who stole $80,000 from his countrymen, was arrested at the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railroad depot. He was taken to the Central Police station and when searched several pawn tickets for diamond rings and jewelry were found, but no money. He had heavy gold bracelets riveted on his wrists and wore fine garters with gold buckles.

Stabbed Her Rival.

COLUMBUS, O., May 3.—Carrie Brown and Nettie Williams, colored damsels, quarreled over the affections of a young man, who has been paying attention to both. Carrie drew a butcher knife from beneath her clothes and stabbed her rival four times over the heart, inflicting wounds that will prove fatal.

Miners Reported Weakening.

COLUMBUS, O., May 3.—Advices from the Hocking valley report everything quiet among the striking miners. A disposition is already shown at a few mines to return to work at old prices. The miners, being without a defense fund, are in a poor condition to carry on a strike very long.

An Old Couple Married.

SPRINGFIELD, O., May 3.—Joseph K. Dick and Mrs. Kenna H. Harmon, aged respectively 79 and 80, living 12 miles north, have been married. Both have great-grandchildren.

Slaters and Tinners Out.

AKRON, O., May 3.—Slaters and tinners of Akron are out on a strike because the contractors refuse to advance their wages 25 per cent.

BARRING OUT AMERICANS.

Welshmen Won't Let Them Learn the Tin Plate Trade.

STEUBENVILLE, O., May 3.—The striking Welshmen at Irondale Tin Plate mill have returned to work. Messrs. Wallace and Duffy of the company, visited Irondale last week and held a conference with Manager Banfield. The Welsh say that the company granted them all they asked, and the company's officials have nothing to say.

The trouble was over the American-born apprentices, whom the company were trying to introduce. The Welshmen are determined to allow no Americans to learn the trade. On this matter there has been no definite agreement reached between the company and the strikers.

Baseball League in Ohio.

MANSFIELD, O., May 3.—A 6-team baseball league, composed of Akron, Canton, Mansfield, Sandusky, Bay City and Saginaw, has been organized here and will be known as the O. & M. (Ohio and Michigan) league. Ex-Mayor George A. Clagston of this city was elected president. The season will open May 18 and close Sept. 20. Salary limit $500 and cash deposit of $200 required by May 13. Charles Hazen will manage Akron, William Delaney will manage Canton, Cal McVey will manage Mansfield, Wally Miller will manage Sandusky, F. P. Craves will manage Bay City. Saginaw is not fully organized. Springfield (O.) wanted to get in, but will not be admitted unless she can get Columbus to go in before May 10. An 8-team schedule, with all these towns, was prepared, but if Springfield and Columbus do not come in, a 6-team schedule will be promulgated at once.

Incorporations in Ohio.

COLUMBUS, O., May 3.—Following are among the new enterprises securing charter rights: The Curtis Social club of Cincinnati; the Bertling Brothers Painting, Varnishing and Finishing company, Cincinnati, capital stock, $10,000; the Electric Light company, Ottawa, capital stock, $30,000; the Reliance Machine and Tool company, Cleveland, capital stock, $30,000; the Church of Christ, Ada; the Ohio Rubber company, Cleveland, capital stock, $65,000; the Akron Boiler company, Akron, capital stock, $100,000; the Hartford Wheel and Machine company, capital stock $3,000.

Harper Is Thriving.

CINCINNATI, May 3.—The return of E. L. Harper to an active business life has stirred up things generally among the brokers who have thrived and grown rich during Harper's confinement. It is given out on good authority that his orders for one day netted him more than $2,000. He has the exclusive agency for some 50 foundries and has received a heavy order for steel rails for a New York car line.

Dr. Oliver Will Return.

COLUMBUS, O., May 3.—Dr. A. H. Oliver, who recently fled from this city to New York to escape arrest for bigamy, is expected to return soon and give bond for his appearance in court. He has retained Attorney E. T. Delaney, and the latter has arranged matters so that the doctor will not be sent to jail upon his return.

Unfortunate Love Affairs.

COLUMBUS, O., May 3.—John L. Burnett, a bookkeeper at the Panhandle railway shops in this city, was locked up at Central police station for safekeeping. He is insane over an unfortunate love affair. His parents had prevented his marriage to Miss Bertha Armstrong of Wellston, and she is prostrated.

The Arabian Banker Caught.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 3.—John Abdow, banker for the Arabian colony, who disappeared with $2,000 belonging to Arabian peddlers, and accompanied by an Arabian girl, has been arrested at Nashville. Chief of Police Cantwell has gone to bring him back on charge of embezzlement and forgery.

The Carpenters Locked Out.

MIDDLETOWN, O., May 3.—The question that has been agitating the contractors and journeymen carpenters in this city came to a climax when the former shut down, and the carpenters found themselves locked out, with nothing to do.

The Manhattan Not Gobbled.

LIMA, O., May 3.—The Manhattan Oil company is far from being gobbled up by the Standard Oil company, the latter being forced by strong competition to advance the price of Lima oil 8 cents per barrel, making the price now 48 cents.

Looks Like Attempted Suicide.

WAUSEON, O., May 3.—Cora Rice, a 19-year-old girl of this place, was found lying unconscious in a gutter in the northern part of the city. It is believed the girl took poison, with the intention of ending her existence. She will recover.

New Paper For Aberdeen.

ABERDEEN, O., May 3.—J. P. Fleming bought at appraisement the outfit of the Aberdeen Journal and will publish it under the name of The Gretna Green, with William Clark editor. William Havens, editor of The Journal, says he will continue to publish The Journal.

A Floater Found.

POMEROY, O., May 3.—A floater 5 feet 8 inches tall, with dark, sandy mustache, and the name of George in India ink on his right arm, was caught at Letart, W. Va. The sum of $48.21 was found in his pocket.

His Disappearance Explained.

MARTIN'S FERRY, O., May 3.—The mysterious disappearance of Alexander Dana, three months ago, has been explained. His body has been found in the river below Bridgeport by some boys who were fishing.

Governor Cleaves and his staff, occupying a special Pullman train, will leave Portland, Me., for the World's fair on the morning of May 20, going by way of Fabyan's and Niagara Falls.

Chauncey Depew, representing a syndicate, has been trying to buy the New York Mail and Express. Dr. Depew has often said that he regarded himself as competent to perform the duties of a good all-round reporter.

THE CUBAN REVOLUTION

No Encounter Has Occurred With the Rebels.

SPANISH TROOPS IN HOT PURSUIT.

A Rumor That the Insurrectionists Will Surrender If Safety Is Guaranteed—A Sympathizer in New York Claims the Movement Is Formidable.

HAVANA, May 3.—The latest news in regard to the insurrection is that the rebels are now between Puerto-Del Padre, a harbor on the northeast coast of Cuba and Manati. Seven columns of troops are in pursuit, the troops being supported by two Spanish ships-of-war off the coast. Up to date not a single encounter has taken place between government troops and the rebels. It is rumored that the rebels propose to surrender if they are guaranteed that their lives will be spared.

A New York dispatch says: Benjamin Guerra, the secretary of the United Cuban societies in this city said that he supposed Saratous, the present leader of the Cuban insurrectionists, according to the cable message received here, who was expected to surrender the command to a well-known Cuban general, had been compelled to show his hand sooner than he anticipated by reason of his plans becoming known to the Spanish authorities. Mr. Guerra thought that he had a large and well armed force.

The departure of the Spanish men-of-war from this port indicates, he felt sure, that they had been ordered to Cuba on account of the revolution.

Spain maintains a standing army of about 25,000 men in Cuba, according to Mr. Guerra's figures, while the present force opposed to them is said to be no larger than 4,000. The secretary thinks that with 1,000 men well acquainted with the island the Spanish forces would be hard pressed. He declared that the revolution sentiment is spreading in Cuba.

AN OHIO MAN'S DEED.

He Shoots a Kentuckian Accused of Assaulting His Sister.

DANVILLE, Ky., May 3.—Barney Higgins, ex-mayor of Somerset, Ky., was shot and mortally wounded by L. A. Wood of Cleveland, brother of Miss F. O. Wood, the lady who was assaulted in the Cincinnati Southern railroad depot on the night of Jan. 6, 1892. The case against Higgins, who is charged with the assault, was set in the Pulaski county court, but continued until the September term.

When Wood was informed of this action he became very much excited and left the room. In passing through the lobby of the courthouse he saw Higgins talking to some friends. He walked toward them and, drawing a revolver, opened fire on his sister's betrayer. Five shots took effect and it is hardly possible the victim will survive the day. Wood was placed under arrest.

The Gold on Hand.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—A compilation of the gold and gold certificates held by national banks in the 10 sub-treasury cities on March 6 shows an aggregate of $103,380,720.50, of which New York held $57,176,972 and Chicago $20,818,020, showing that New York alone held more than the nine other cities. The total for all the national banks in the country in gold and gold certificates was $169,000,000, of which New York held more than one-third.

Carter Again Making Argument.

PARIS, May 3.—At the Bering sea tribunal of arbitration J. C. Carter of counsel for the United States maintained that the rights of the United States in Bering sea were absolute. He argued over again that the United States government was justified in protecting its rights in those waters at all times. The United States had a right to seize vessels caught in pelagic sealing.

Great Attention to the Fair.

LONDON, May 3.—The world's fair at Chicago is given a great deal of space in the London newspapers. Their leading editorials on the subject express hearty good will toward the exposition, and hope for its success. The Daily News publishes a cable dispatch three columns long descriptive of the opening of the fair.

Sailors to Have Boat Races.

NEW YORK, May 3.—A series of boat races are to be indulged in by crews of the foreign warships next Saturday in the North river. American tars will not be permitted to enter, another regatta for them exclusively having been arranged for the same day.

Colonel Forney's Son Dead.

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—John W. Forney, Jr., youngest son of the late Colonel John W. Forney, founder of the Philadelphia Press, died at his home, after a protracted illness. Mr. Forney was in his 47th year.

A Baron Suicides.

VIENNA, May 3.—Baron Richard Roecke of the tourist's journal, The Freidenblatt, has committed suicide by jumping from a fourth-story window of a building. The baron was 80 years of age and well known in Vienna.

Harrisburg Carpenters Strike.

HARRISBURG, May 3.—Fifty house carpenters at work in various part of the city struck for an advance from $2 $2.50 per day of nine hours. If they gain their point at least 350 others will follow.

The Chicago Waiters' Strike.

CHICAGO, May 3.—The waiters strike is still on. At present it does not assume as great proportions as predicted. Each side claims the upper hand at present.

Big Strike in Dundee.

DUNDEE, May 3.—Nineteen thousand working people employed in the jute mills at this place have gone out on a strike.

Cigarmakers Strike.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., May 3.—Cigarmakers employed at Lenison's cigar factory here went on strike because refused a 10 per cent increase.

THE OHIO MINERS' STRIKE.

Hocking Valley Men Expected to Go Back in a Week.

NELSONVILLE, O., May 2.—All the miners in the Hocking valley are out, but it is thought they will return to work inside of a week.

A Bellaire dispatch says: Twenty-five hundred coal miners are out in the Sixth sub-district of Ohio. Several local operators are willing to pay the price, 75 cents per ton, but no terms will be made with them as yet.

Incorporations in Ohio.

COLUMBUS, O., May 2.—The United Workmen's Beneficial Smokers' Casino of Cincinnati was incorporated in the office of the secretary of state by Messrs. Charles H. Schafer, H. B. Mott, Charles J. Muller, Joe Hartman and Henry Miller. The organization is formed for the purpose of affording social enjoyment and mutual assistance in sickness and death. Messrs. Tiffin Gilmore, Dennis McConnell, J. D. Wood, H. H. Bennett and William John Cobill incorporated the Chillicothe Athletic club, with a capital stock of $1,000. Other incorporations were as follows: The Sugar Grove Cemetery association, Sugar Grove; the African Methodist Episcopal church of Smithfield; the Bellaire, Bridgeport and Martin's Ferry Street Railway company, Bridgeport, capital stock $250,000.

Body of an Unknown.

TIFFIN, O., May 2.—An unknown man was killed while walking on the Baltimore and Ohio tracks in this city. A Troy (O.) memorandum book in his pocket showed that he had been working steadily for several months and contained the name of Starten, which may or may not be his own. The man was about 40 years old, with a light complexion, dark hair and light mustache, 5 feet 9 inches high, weighing 155 pounds.

Their Marriage Revealed.

SPRINGFIELD, O., May 2.—Quite a surprise was created here by the announcement that Miss Lovetta Stoner, stenographer for William N. Whitely, the quondam reaper king, now located in Muncie, Ind., and S. C. Williams, a traveling man from Wayne county, were married. They eloped to Covington April 17. They are residing at Parkersburg, W. Va.

Enforcing the Sunday Law.

SPRINGFIELD, O., May 2.—As a result of the reforms instituted by the new city administration, laborers on the Ohio Southern railroad extension have been stopped. Superintendent Ramsey declares that if they must stop, so must the running of street cars, venders of Sunday newspapers and the selling of cigars, milk, etc. A hot time is looked for.

Had Been Hoarding Money.

LOUDONVILLE, O., May 2.—William Kidd, the father of Mrs. T. B. Lemon of that place, was buried at Millersburg. He was supposed to be in the most destitute circumstances. When the administrator searched the property this week he was surprised, when, in overturning an old barrel in the cellar, he found a tin can in which was $8,200 in gold and $133 in greenbacks.

Another Cincinnati Failure.

CINCINNATI, May 2.—The furniture house of H. W. Frankenstein, at Ninth and Central avenue, was closed by the sheriff. Writs of attachment were obtained in the common pleas court on a number of confessed judgment notes, amounting to $17,000. A deed of assignment was filed later. Liabilities, $40,000; assets, $25,000.

New Baltimore and Ohio Shops.

BELLAIRE, O., May 2.—The Baltimore and Ohio railroad shops at Benwood, W. Va., have started up in full blast, giving employment to about 500 people. The shops were moved from this city with a large force of men last week, and were a great loss to Bellaire. All trains on the trans-Ohio division will be started from that point hereafter.

Agent Miskall Won.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., May 2.—The Democratic balloting for selection of a choice for the nomination for postmaster absorbed almost as much attention as a general election, and almost a full vote was polled, the result showing a plurality for M. E. Miskall, Pennsylvania railroad agent, of nearly 300 in a total vote of about 1,000.

Harper Returns Home.

CINCINNATI, May 2.—E. L. Harper, who has spent six years in the penitentiary for wrecking the Fidelity National bank and who was pardoned by President Harrison, returned to his home in Hartwell, accompanied by his wife. The meeting between Harper and his children was most affecting.

The Standard After Something.

FINDLAY, O., May 2.—The Standard Oil company has advanced the price of crude to 49 cents a barrel in the North field and 46½ in the South field, this being an advance of 3 cents since Saturday. There is much speculation among producers as to what this last move means.

A Steubenville Grocer Assigns.

STEUBENVILLE, O., May 2.—John Andregg has made an assignment to W. I. Medill. He has been engaged in the grocery business, and was one of the defeated candidates for street commissioner at the spring election. The assets are $3,000, and the liabilities exceed that amount.

Turned Over to the Authorities.

FREMONT, O., May 2.—Ernest Schultzka, in jail under indictment for assault and battery, and who has made three attempts to take his life, has by Judge L. Green been ordered taken to New York and turned over to the commissioner of immigration.

A Double Tragedy.

LONDON, May 3.—A frightful tragedy is reported from the town of Gresford, in Denbighshire, Wales. Mrs. Whittle was killed by her groom, named Shellard, who then killed himself.

The Choctaws at Peace.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—A telegram from Indian Inspector Faison states that the Choctaw outlook is altogether peaceful. The Locke force and the militia are disbanding.

POOR LITTLE MAID.

OLIVE HARPER DOES NOT BLAME HER FOR REPINING.

New Hats Are Bright and Beautiful—Some Lovely Tea Jackets—Homemade Fans. A Girl Who Makes Her Own Hats and Frocks.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, April 27.—It was a cry from a maiden's soul, and this was its cause: A fond but rigid mother was talking to her pretty young daughter about the sinfulness of trying to outshine one's neighbors and telling her that the adornment of a young girl should be modesty and humility. It was then that the poor child lifted up her tear stained face and said:

"Yes, mamma, I know that is all true and that you are perfectly right; but, oh, I look like a sardine in that old hat!"

Who can blame the girl with all her natural love for beauty and freshness, and particularly when everything is so bright and beautiful, and when every hat is a bower of loveliness shading the flower face below? Certainly not I. When she and hundreds of other bright young girls pass the show windows where everything is alluring and the most exquisite flowers are trailed and twined all around, where shining ribbons lie about in mocking profusion and bonnets and hats of every conceivable form are temptingly displayed on pretty waxen faces, who can blame the little hearts for wanting a new one—for choosing out one particular love and longing for it, remembering all the while that she "looks like a sardine" in the old one.

Do men never have desires after the unobtainable in the way of dress suits, fancy neckties or red kid gloves? Do they ever have to look in a hatter's window and think how much they would like one of those shining silk hats with the newest roll to the brim? If they do, I am sure they never condemn themselves as looking like sardines in the ones they have on. It would be beneath their dignity to think themselves anything less than perfect even in an old hat, but the poor little maid who longs for the bonnet is truly modest.

Let us hope that somehow in the somewhere girls can always have all the new bonnets they want. This millennium might come if girls would learn to trim and make their own bonnets. The difference in the price is so very great that the knowledge is certainly worth striving for. Then no pretty girl need bewail and compare herself to one of those greasy little fishes.

They tell us suddenly that tea gowns have had their day. It was a pretty long day and a pretty day they had. Some ladies with very conservative tastes, or who realize that tea gowns are more becoming than anything else, will cling to them, so that they will not really go out entirely. The tea jacket is now the favorite and is in some respects better, as it can be worn with any skirt—that is, almost any skirt, a lady's own taste suggesting the proper combination better than I could. These tea jackets are very ornate and dressy and loose. They are laced and beribboned to the heart's content.

One I saw recently had a fall of handsome black chantilly reaching from the neck down, 40 inches from shoulder to bottom. Outside of that was a simulated zouave of pale purple sicilienne silk, with sleeves to match. There was a close hemmed, box plaited ruffle as trimming, as may be understood by a glance at the picture. Lace falls finished the short sleeves, and loops and long ends of lilac ribbon finished the front. Such a jacket is a very graceful adjunct to almost any toilet. It would be very elegant over a white or light skirt.

Another jacket was snugger in form, having a sort of full military skirt. The model was of dark green velvet, with cream ribbed silk lapels and a handsomely arranged jabot of white lace down the front, which is intended to be left open slightly. Around the neck and the sleeves is a fulled band of figured silk, made into knots on the arms. Altogether this is very elegant and would do duty over almost any skirt.

Below these pictures I have put two of the daintiest new fans, which any bright young lady can make for herself. A young girl of my acquaintance made one like each by aid of a couple of old time parasol handles. The feather fan had a very small foundation of stiff muslin over wire, which was coiled and turned around the handle until it was perfectly solid. This was covered with white silk and the plumes sewn on. It requires 8 to 10, and they can be bought for about $3. One yard of white satin ribbon finished it. Such a fan ready made would cost from $10 to $15, according to where bought.

To make the other she took a 5-cent Japanese fan and fastened the ivory handle in place of the wooden one and covered the whole with light pink crepe de chine and then sewed lace over the outside, bringing the end down gracefully under a spray of wild rose with its leaves. This fan had the advantage that she could take off the artificial flower and attach a rose, a bunch of violets or any other natural flower, and it was very much admired.

This same ingenious young girl designs all her own clothes and trims her own hats. Her last frock is a picture. It is of simple crepon, in maize and tan—a dainty combination—and it is daringly trimmed with black velvet ribbon. It was she who made the little pocket and added the lace frill to the maize surah parasol and the bow of blue ribbon that matches that on her hat and the plumes. Really and truly, girlies, if you would only use your own wits a little and learn how to make the most of things, just see how pretty you could always be, and you would never, never look "like a sardine."

Yesterday I reveled in new summer silks. I found satin duchess to be one of the favorites. The pattern is mostly stripes of white or very light over dark blue, dark green, brown, etc., and also black. It is in some lights faintly changeable, which makes it very attractive. Some of the new silks have surah ground, with small figures. There are black fancies in stripes where one stripe is of brocaded satin and another of heavy faille. This pattern is indescribably rich.

There are brocades and brocatelles in every shade and color, which are to be used for home gowns, tea gowns and evening dresses.

The taffetas are in some instances plain; in others brocaded in small figures and so dainty and delicate that they are perfect pictures. There is also a large line of tartan plaid silks.

There is a new material called china mousseline. It is 24 inches wide and of the most exquisite fineness and is quite transparent. It is not harsh like the other silk muslins, but has all the softness of china crape. Silks gain always in public favor, but the time has come when we are obliged to admit that our American silks are the best in the world.

OLIVE HARPER.

ABORIGINAL PIPES.

Some Interesting Relics of Old Times and Races.

[Special Correspondence.]

OMAHA, April 27.—Although our national breath is redolent of tobacco, and the average citizen's cigar bill is more of an item than his contributions to church or charity, it is yet a fact that the formula of "Thanks; I don't smoke" is far more common with us than with those who preceded us in the occupation of American soil.

In the exploration of many of the remains of the American aborigines I have found the pipe to be one of the most widely distributed and frequently occurring relics of those old times and races. Through the low Indian burial mounds of the far east, through the gigantic tumuli of the Ohio and Mississippi valleys, through the ancient caves and cemeteries of the West Indies and in all the majestic ruins of Aztec architecture in our southwestern territories and in Mexico I have rarely failed to find the pipe among the worldly effects which were habitually buried with the dead. That smoking played an important part in the domestic and social life of the more recent Indian tribes is well known. That it had much to do with the comfort and enjoyment of the more ancient races we may well suppose from the fact that the greatest of care was taken in making and ornamenting their pipes. In many cases their decoration was really elaborate.

A bamboo pipe used by the natives of the West Indies four or five centuries ago is quite unique. It was their custom to lay the green leaves of tobacco upon a bed of live coals, producing a thick "smudge." The forked end of the pipe was then placed in the nostrils and the other end in the dense cloud of smoke, which was directly inhaled. The effects of the tobacco were much more marked when it was thus inhaled, often producing complete intoxication and stupor.

Another curious pipe is one of baked clay, from an Aztec city in Socorro county, N. M. With the users of these quaint pipes the culture of tobacco was always an all important industry.

W. R. LIGHTON.

A Peaceful People.

The village of Chincoteague, on the Virginia island of that name, is without other government than that administered by a local justice of the peace and a county constable, although the place has more than 1,000 inhabitants.

CANTON AND COURT HOUSE

Thursday.

CANTON, April 27.—Louisa Myers has been appointed guardian of Howard and Clara Myers, of Navarre.

The wills of James V. Tournoux, of Nimishillen township, Sarah M. McCowen, of Alliance, and Frantz Probstfield, of Massillon, were filed to-day.

Nicholas Stonebill has been appointed administrator of Sarah Keim's estate in Paris township.

Marriage licenses have been granted to George Fox and Margaret Witt, of Crystal Springs, and Clarence M. Doxsee and Viola Kerstetter, of Massillon.

MR. WELTY'S STABLES.

John C. Welty has just finished one of the finest private stables in northern Ohio. The main portion is a two story frame, 80x50 feet, and contains eight large box stalls, with a hall-way ten feet wide wide. The entire inside is of oiled oak, with carved posts and open, ornamental iron work between each stall, above the wood furnishings. Each stall is arranged with a sliding door with a patent self locking fastening. In the rear of the main stable is another stable, for the colts and the young things, which opens into a commodious paddock, surrounded by a high picket fence. The News Democrat says that ten of the highest bred youngsters in the land, by such sires as Simmons, Sulton, Elyria, Brown Wilkes and other famous sires, luxuriate in these stalls and paddock.

MAYOR CASSIDY'S PLATFORM.

Mayor Cassidy is making a record for himself, and his official career is bristling with interesting points. During the progress of a hearing the other day he said: "The court is no lawyer or the son of a lawyer, but we will get at the truth if it is attainable, and mere forms and technicalities will not be allowed to block our way * * * The testimony satisfies the court that the prisoners are guilty and deserve punishment. We feel that we should be doing less than our duty should we allow them to escape that punishment because of some informality in getting at the real facts of the case or in naming the offense."

THE CONKLIN AFFAIR

Five of the leading Canton physicians have declared themselves against the course pursued by the health authorities, in hustling the small pox patient, Charles Graber, back to Akron. Dr. Ed Brant referring to Dr. Conklin's advice to send Gruber to Akron, said: "I think that was a very wrong act in him. It was not fair toward Akron and was inhuman as applied to Gruber." This is a sample of the interviews.

Friday.

CANTON, April 28.—A. W. Goshorn has been appointed administrator of Mathias Sisterhen's estate in Navarre, and Charles E. and William J. Oberlin administrators of the estate of Samuel Oberlin, of Massillon.

Marriage licenses have been granted to John W. Koth and Ruth Owens, of Massillon; Adam Hartong and Ida A. Snook, of Canal Fulton; William A. Karrer and Edith A. Raeder, of Canton.

RELIEVING DR. CONKLIN.

The Canton board of health has adopted this:

"Whereas the public press, ignorant of the facts in the case, have charged that the return of Gruber to Akron was by order of Dr. Conklin, president of the state board of health.

"Resolved, By the Canton board of health, that the foregoing preamble be published for the information of all whom it may concern, and in justice to Dr. Conklin, president of the state board of Health, whose responsibility for the acts of this board and its officers are limited to his membership to the same."

ANOTHER ELECTRIC RAILWAY.

The Salem News says that the Canton-Salem Electrical Company already having the contract to light Salem, has increased its capital stock $150,000. A charter has already been secured for the building of an electric railroad from Canton to Salem, and the projectors expect to extend it from Salem to Youngstown, via Canfield, O. The company is composed of able and competent business men who have ample capital at their command to carry out anything they undertake. The work will be pushed through to early completion. The officers of the board are as follows: President, Hon Joseph A. Linville; vice president, Robert A. Carran, Cleveland; secretary, Joseph B. K. Turner; treasurer, Anthony Housel; general superintendent, John Hadley.

ED AUNDING'S CASE

Ed Aunding appeared before Mayor Cassidy, Wednesday, and pleaded not guilty to the charge of assault upon Tom Devine. Aunding declares that he was in an adjoining saloon when the men assaulted Devine and that he had nothing to do with the disturbance.

THAT SMALLPOX TROUBLE.

Concerning the smallpox case at Wadsworth, alleged to have reached there from Canton's isolated case via the Akron route over which the Canton case traveled, a Wadsworth dispatch says: "The village of Wadsworth is up in arms over the smallpox case which has developed there. Wallace Freeborn and Burt Freeborn were arrested and fined for violating the quarantine."

Saturday.

CANTON, April 29.—The bids for the erection of a hospital at the county infirmary were accepted and opened by the county commissioners yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The building is to be constructed of stone and brick and to be 124 feet in length. The contract was granted to F. Millhof, T. P. Cordrey and M. C. Heininger, of Canton, their bid being $9,990, the lowest entered. The bondsmen are: A. Gachatte, Frank Rose and J. W. Underhill. The other bids received are as follows: Samuel Brumbaugh, $12,2 8; Daniel Holwick, $11,676.43; Charles Brown, $12,997.50; Melbourne & Melbourne, $12,983 10.

A civil action petition, wherein J. H. Hunt brings suit against Amos J. Wampler, Paul D. Wampler as makers, and Freeman Stooh and Milton McIntosh as endorsers, to recover judgment on a promissory note for $325 and interest, has been filed in common pleas court. Willison & Day are the attorneys for the plaintiff.

Alice Faubel has petitioned the common pleas court for a divorce from Martin Faubel, on the grounds of extreme cruelty and habitual drunkenness on the part of the latter. Wann & Bow are the attorneys for the plaintiff.

A. C. Strong has been appointed administrator of the estate of Jacob P. Weybrecht, of Alliance, and Valentine Heck has been appointed guardian of the minor heirs of Sophia Heck, of Massillon.

W. A. Combs has been given a position as conductor on the inter-urban line. He is being instructed by Conductor William Eish.

A marriage license has been granted to Albert Hisey and Jennie E. Snider, of Oval City.

MARKLEY HAD A PARTNER

ANOTHER LINK ADDED TO THE CHAIN OF TESTIMONY.

William Markley had Picked Up an Acquaintance with some now Missing Man, who may or may not have had an Interest in Making Way with Him.

It is the general belief through the city that Will Markley, who was found along the W. & L. E. track last Tuesday morning, dying from a knife wound, was murdered, and convincing facts are slowly coming to light. On last Saturday afternoon a respectable looking man between 25 and 30 years of age, applied at the office of the Light, Heat and Power Company for work. He had in his possession a letter from the Globe Carbon Company, of Ravenna, recommending "Dell Russell," and stating that he had been in their employ for a number of years and was a competent workman. Superintendent McLain informed the man that the only work they could give him would be in the ditch laying gas pipe. The stranger answered that he understood the work and would start on Monday morning. This was the last time he was seen.

On Monday afternoon a young man, who from the description given exactly resembled Markley, came to the office and stated that he was looking for the man who had applied for work on Saturday, and wanted to know if he was working, as the latter had told him about securing work and that he was going to commence on Monday.

When informed that the man in question had not turned up, he seemed very much put out and disappointed. He said:

"That man promised me faithfully that he would go to work this morning and now I suppose he has skipped out and given me the worst of the bargain. I have been paying Russell's expenses for almost a week, and when I secured employment at that paint shop (pointing to John Goehler's) Russell promised to go to work here until he had paid back the sum I loaned him. I did not know him very well, but when we met he was out of money, and I having plenty said I would help him find employment. I will try and find him tonight, and if he is trying to get away from me, we will have an understanding."

With this last remark the young man left the office and nothing more was heard from either. The man who was looking for "Russell" answered Markley's description exactly, and was the same man that worked in Goehler's paint shop Friday and Saturday.

RUSSELL'S CHARACTER.

RAVENNA, April 29, 2:30 p. m.—Russell helped us out with some work we had. As far as we know he is all right.

GLOBE CARBON CO.

When Humane Officer Hose saw the dead body of Markley he noticed in it a close resemblance to a man who had inquired of himself and Henry Oehler at Portmann's tin store at 9 o'clock Monday morning where he could find Painter John Hendry. The man said that he was a painter who had come from Mansfield and was hunting work.

THEY WANT SALOONS CLOSED.

Good Templars Meet and Adopt Resolutions.

The Independent Order of Good Templars met last night and elected the following officers for the ensuing term: Horace Wilson, C. T.; Henry Fricker, V. T.; N. L. Peacock, secretary; Irene Seeley, F. S.; C. E. Widdecombe, treasurer; Mrs. H. M. Wilson, chaplain; Anna Meek, M.; Anna Nichols, G.; John Derbyshire, S. These officers will be installed next Friday evening.

A resolution was unanimously passed directing the Chief Templar and secretary to inform the mayor that the members of the lodge demand a strict enforcement of the Sunday law, in the closing of liquor shops.

LABOR LEGISLATION.

What was Done by the Seventieth General Assembly.

COLUMBUS, April 29.—The following is a synopsis of the labor legislation of the 70th general assembly, as arranged by Commissioner Lewis:

An act to provide for payment of attorney's fees in action for wages.

Providing against the employment of inexperienced persons as conductors on railways.

Providing for a board of arbitration and conciliation.

The Township Tax Levy.

The township trustees, at their regular monthly meeting held in Clerk Hemperly's office, last night, made the yearly tax levy. The levy amounts to two and seven-tenths mills and is apportioned as follows:

For Township Purposes	4-10 mills
" Road Fund	1 "
" Poor "	3-10 "
" Bridge "	1 "

The only other business of importance was the paying of a number of bills.

Two Persons Mysteriously Disappear.

ASHLAND, O., May 1.—The county north of here is all torn up over the mysterious disappearance of William Shire, a prominent farmer. He disappeared last week, and has not been heard of since. The county has been scoured, and the creeks have been dragged for his body, but no clew has been found. A small son of Elmer Ewing, 13 years of age, has been lost for five days. The Black Fork river has been dragged and telegrams have been sent all over the country. The topic of the county is their strange disappearance. The police have no clue to either.

Returned Again to His Wife.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 1.—Thomas Foy, who disappeared suddenly 18 months ago, entered the house and his wife fell fainting into his arms. Foy says he left to lead a new life, and has been to Australia and around the world as a steamer roustabout. "I have sown my wild oats and will take good care of my family," said Foy. After his disappearance, a decomposed body was found hanging in the woods, and identified as Foy's.

Burglars Got Her Money.

HAMILTON, O., May 1.—Two masked burglars obtained entrance to the home of Mrs. Henry Keller, an aged widow residing in the vicinity of Millville. The old lady was attacked, seized by the throat and thrown upon a bed. Here, weak and exhausted, she was held while one of the assailants, amid oaths and threats, demanded her money. All her possessions, a meager pittance of $1.50, were turned over.

Tried to End Her Troubles.

MIDDLETOWN, O., May 1.—Mrs. Stephens, the wife of a physician of this city, made a desperate attempt to take her life. She and her husband had parted and he had a warrant sworn out against her for smashing things in his office. When the officer went to serve the warrant, she was found unconscious with a morphine bottle beside her.

A Woman Commits Suicide.

WOOSTER, O., May 1.—Mrs. Jacob Buss of Paradise, this county, suicided by slashing herself across the bowels and stomach with a razor. One cut was so deep that the entrails protruded. She lived 30 minutes after committing the deed. She was the mother of eight children and in comfortable financial circumstances.

Age and Youth United.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 1.—William Thomas Sterling, aged 74, and Miss Anna Reed, aged 20, both of Bethel, Pa., came here and were married. The aged groom said: "It is purely a love match. I have to work for a living, and have no fortune to attact any young girl."

A Widow in Luck.

SPRINGFIELD, O., May 1.—Julia Farrell, a poor widow, has just been notified that she has fallen heir to $40,000 worth of real estate, left her by Martin Welch, a Philadelphia relative, who died there about two weeks ago.

To Vote on Local Option.

SPRINGFIELD, O., May 1.—The township trustees met and issued a call for a special election on May 27, to vote on local option. This only affects the township outside of the city and the "drys" are certain to carry the day.

HAVE YOU AN ENCYCLOPEDIA?

You Can Have a Complete Set for the Sum of $2 25!

The publishers are about to conclude negotiations whereby they will offer a very desirable premium to readers of THE WEEKLY INDEPENDENT, and the terms upon which it is offered seem so favorable, and the premium so attractive, that for a limited period it will be offered to daily patrons also. The remarkable proposition is this: To every new subscriber who pays in advance for ten weeks' subscription to the daily edition (one dollar), or to every old subscriber who pays that amount in advance, a full set of Chamber's Encyclopædia will be sold for $2 25 additional. That is, for $3 25 you can get Chamber's Encyclopædia and THE DAILY INDEPENDENT for ten weeks. The set includes thirty handy size volumes. It is a beautiful, clear reprint of the Edinburgh and London edition of Chamber's Encyclopædia, a library of universal knowledge for the people, with very large additions upon topics of special interest to American readers, and giving American statistics of population down to and including the census of 1890.

The set may be seen now, at THE INDEPENDENT business office. To any body who wants a working encyclopædia, just as reliable as any, and who cannot afford to invest thirty dollars, in the old style editions of Chamber's or $100 in the Brittanica, this is a golden opportunity.

It is only occasionally that such chances come. This offer will be withdrawn from patrons of the daily edition, in three weeks. For three weeks only you can get Chamber's Encyclopædia for $2 25, in thirty volumes.

A THEATRICAL REVIEW.

Mrs. Frank Leslie's Adaptation of "Le Demi Monde."

THEATER OF ARTS AND LETTERS.

The Barren Results of a "Stage Elevating" Experiment—The Coghlans' Revival of "Peg Woffington"—The Youngest American Playright—Other Chitchat.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The only real theatrical novelty in the city is another of the numerous adaptations of "Le Demi Monde." This particular version, which is entitled "The Froth of Society," is the work of Mrs. Frank Leslie, who thus makes her debut as a playwright. The piece has been on the road and is said to have been very favorably received in the south. The principal roles are intrusted to Joseph Haworth and Emily Rigl, two particularly competent actors. In fact, it is my opinion that Miss Rigl's superiors in highly emotional roles in the whole world can be counted on the fingers of one hand.

SCENE FROM "PEG WOFFINGTON."

Mrs. Leslie explained to me some time ago that it was her desire to make the acts of the characters in her play seem more logical than in the original, and several of the changes that she has made are, it must be admitted, decidedly for the better. Mrs. Leslie also told me that she intends to do a good deal of playwriting. She thinks that she possesses the true dramatic instinct, no matter in what particular respects her work may be defective now, and I am inclined to agree with her. "The Froth of Society" may not be considered a phenomenally brilliant adaptation, but the measure of success which has been accorded it will doubtless serve to encourage the brilliant woman who is responsible for it to persevere in her new line of work until she shall have evolved a play which will give her as high a position as a dramatist as she now enjoys as a litterateur and publisher.

The good people who read New York newspapers and New York dramatic letters will now have a rest from the Theater of Arts and Letters until next season, for that peculiar institution is winding up for the year at Palmer's theater. This exclusive "subscription" organization which charged its patrons $5 a performance and compelled them to purchase tickets for the entire course at that figure is now admitting the common herd at regular prices at Palmer's. I say "admitting," but that is not the correct expression. "Willing to admit" would be very much nearer the mark, for the people have not beseiged the doors of the theater in their hysterical anxiety to see the plays which dramatists are unable to concoct, and which were therefore put together by "literary folks."

MLLE. ROSE POMPON.

Incredible as it may seem, no special detail of policemen has been necessary to keep the general public from breaking in the doors of Palmer's theater in its mad rush to witness the Arts and Letters' "too-good-for-the-average-theater-goer" performances. In fact, I have heard it stated that that pig headed jade, the aforesaid general pub[illegible] not attend in large numbers even wi[illegible] great inducement of many free tickets, [illegible]cept in theatrical parlance "paper."

But to sum it all up the Theater of Arts and Letters was on its face an improbability. On its record it is an absurdity. It is a hideous excrescence on the body dramatic, not because of the poor judgment displayed in the selection of most of its plays, nor because of the fact that it is not managed by a theatrical man, but because it has used the "elevation of the drama" as a stepping stone to exploiting several plays which no one cared to see, and one of which at least brought repeated roars of laughter, although it was intended by the author to be positively grewsome in its seriousness. Such things bring the stage into contempt. They "elevate" it downward.

Let us see how the Theater of Arts and Letters has lived up to its promises. Broadly stated, at the outset of its career it cited as an excuse for its existence the well known fact that scores of meritorious plays are annually passed around from one professional manager to another only to be declined. In other words, theatrical speculators, as a rule, do not care in this country to try new material. They prefer to exploit "foreign successes," which, by the way, generally prove failures, rather than trust themselves to select an apparently valuable play by a new or unknown author. This looks like good, safe business method to the layman, but it isn't.

The foreign plays generally don't seem to exactly suit American audiences. Nevertheless this timidity of the managers made it practically impossible for any resident of the United States outside of the few dramatists with established reputations to have his own play produced. This was a very discouraging condition for the development of the native drama, and it was nominally to correct this evil that the Theater of Arts and Letters was founded. But the pieces which have been produced are in nearly every case the work of men and women who already have national reputations in the world of letters, and at least one of the plays was written by a dramatist whose work is in great demand, and who therefore scarcely needed a start from anybody.

All in all, outside of affording a good deal of merriment by floundering about in water much too deep for it, the Theater of Arts and Letters has done nothing except to discourage liberal minded patrons from contributing in the future to something which might really prove a stepping stone to fame for young dramatists. "The burnt child dreads the fire," and it will be a long time before any similar enterprise will find the necessary backing.

Rose and Charles Coghlan and their excellent company have revived "Masks and Faces," otherwise "Peg Woffington," at the Fifth Avenue theater. The production has been received with favor, "Diplomacy" having about run itself out. The fact that the latter play was particularly successful owing to the magnificent cast and elegant mounting when it was resurrected at the Star theater, added to its enthusiastic reception on the road, perhaps had the effect of inducing the Coghlans to keep it on the boards even after it had become a little less potent as a drawing card, and in consequence business at the Fifth Avenue theater since "Diplomacy" came back to New York has not been as good as it might have been. For this reason "Peg Woffington" is said to have been rushed on rather hurriedly, and yet every one who has seen it seems to have been pleased with the production and the work of the actors who appear in it. Miss Coghlan has been especially commended, as has also Mr. Frederic Robinson.

Mlle. Rose Pompon, the latest importation from France for "The Black Crook," is gyrating into the very core of the heart of New York dudedom. This vivacious little "chanteuse excentrique" is very much like others of her class, except that she is considered more clever than a majority of them. She has made a big hit, and that is saying a great deal when it is considered how many French quadrille dancers we have had lately. Pompon, as I hear it, is to dance and warble in Chicago under her present management during the World's fair and will then go to London, where she has an excellent engagement beginning next October. When she leaves these hospitable shores, she will be the possessor of much more wealth than she now has. Of course Mlle. Pompon likes "dear America" —now.

It has been generally supposed that Glen Mac Donough is the youngest successful playwright in America, but it seems that he is not, as Paul Kester is not yet a man. Rather he has not yet attained his majority. Kester commenced writing plays a few years ago. His first work was called "Countess Roudine." It was submitted to Mme. Modjeska, who accepted it. Kester immediately began work on another play, which he has named "The Earl of Grammont."

Meanwhile Modjeska had produced "Countess Roudine" in New York, but the young author was so busy with his new piece that he did not come east to see the premier of his first play. At the time Kester was living in Detroit. When he had finished "The Earl of Grammont," he sent it to Alexander Salvini, who liked it and requested Kester to meet him in Chicago. Salvini then engaged him at a large salary to travel with him and write plays especially adapted to his abilities.

Next season, besides "The Earl of Grammont," the brilliant young Italian actor will produce at least one other of Mr. Kester's plays, which is to be named "The Last of the Moors." Salvini's role in this piece requires heroic acting, and the play admits of elaborate mounting—two things of which he is particularly fond. Mr. Kester, it should be stated, is a native of Virginia, but was reared in Ohio.

I hear that Felix Morris, Rosina Vokes' remarkably clever leading man, is to star next season in a play especially written for him. If the rumor be true, the venture ought to result in the addition of another luminary to the stellar firmament, for Felix Morris probably has no superior in his particular line of work. He has run the whole gamut of acting, starting in at the bottom and working by gradual stages to the top. He is one of a very limited number of the school of light comedy, and his reputation is sufficient to insure him respectful consideration in his new venture.

OCTAVUS COHEN.

The Lilliputians are booked for a long run in New York next season. They will appear in a new play, entitled "A Trip to Mars," which Carl Rosenfeld is now preparing for them.

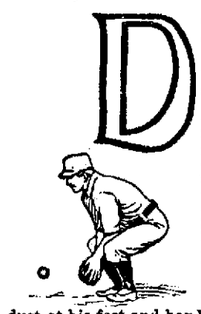
TOM LOVETT'S CHANGE OF HEART.

Hornung and Burdock Owned Boston Once Upon a Time—A Noted Auction Sale. Retrospective Thoughts of Trophies of Victory—Great Luck of Joe Quest.



DO "ALL things come to him who waits" according to the ancient adage? The kicking baseball player, Pitcher Tommy Lovett of the Brooklyns, does not think so. He waited an entire year at a cost of $3,300 for the Brooklyn officials to come into his presence, bow themselves in the dust at his feet and beg him to go to their aid at his own terms. They came not, however. He suffered and perspired in private one whole summer and meditated and shivered one entire winter, and then he saw a great light. The light led him on and on till it brought him to the gates of Eastern park, the home of the Brooklyn club. To his knock came the invitation, "Enter." So the prodigal had returned. But they killed no fatted calf. They did not even open a keg of beer. All that greeted the penitent was a cold "Hello, Tommy." An hour later he had signed a contract calling for just $600 less than was offered him last spring and $900 less than he demanded.

The case of Lovett was a prod to drive many of the holdbacks of this spring into camp, and they are all there except about as many as you can count upon the fingers of one hand without going over the row twice. This, too, in spite of all the volume of threats from players who several months ago declared they would quit playing ball and "go into business" before they would accept a reduction in salary to fit the receipts of the game. Some of the boys were bluffing, but some were in "dead earnest." Each one of the latter class seemed to believe that there was an empty niche in the business or commercial temple waiting for him to step into and fill. He expected that "going into business" was as easy as going in and out of the rain, but somehow the tide of trade would not catch him up in its mad swirl, and when baseball salary days began to run he concluded wisely that a two-thirds loaf was better than none, and he hastened to get in touch with the club paymaster.

A reminder comes along here that baseball has none of the heroes now it had in the past. Last week Charley Jones was appointed an Eastern league umpire. And if there be one man on earth who has more enemies than any other that man is an umpire. But Jones is glad to accept the berth. For what it pays him he agrees to "bear the proud man's contumely" and take his chances of escaping with life from the vengeance of the cranks.

Yet this is the same Jones whose popularity in the early eighties was sometimes annoying to him. I have seen him during those days take refuge from the worshipful throng of boys and men who followed him along the street until he became annoyed beyond the limit of his endurance.

Another applicant for an umpireship is Joe Hornung. He is anxious to get the berth at a salary of $150 a month. In the fall of 1883 I was a witness to this man's acme of popularity. The scene was the Boston baseball grounds; the occasion was the first meeting between the Boston and Providence clubs. This game decided the National league championship for that season. Nine innings were played, and the score was a tie. Joe Hornung, the Boston's left fielder, led off for his team in the ninth inning with a 3-base hit and scored the winning run on Burdock's safe single to right. The scene which followed cannot be described. Suffice it to say that Hornung and Burdock, both immensely popular before that day, could have had the keys of the city for the asking that night. Their names were on the lips of half the people of Boston. Longfellow and Dr. Holmes could have been spared more easily just then than Hornung and Burdock. That was less than ten years ago. Today Joe could not borrow a picayune from any of the thousand Bostonians who that night sang his praise, and Burdock last week was sent to the workhouse for ten days on conviction of drunkenness and loitering.

Since the proposition was made to bring the old Cincinnati Red Stockings and their conquerors—the Atlantics—together at Chicago on June 14 there has been unearthed a newspaper account of an auction sale which took place at the Union grounds—the Red Stockings' home in Cincinnati—in April following the celebrated game in Brooklyn mentioned in my last letter. Among the effects sold on that occasion were a pitcher and goblet won in a tournament in 1867, a gold medal won in 1866 and the different balls won in the celebrated year of unbroken victories. These balls sold for from $1 to $10. The latter price was paid for the 24 Mutual ball of 1869. Thus in less than nine months the culmination of the Red Stockings' fame in their defeat on the Capitoline grounds the team was dispersed, the club had disbanded and all the trophies of victories were sold.

Since that day the fame of those Red Stockings has had a resurrection, and it will live as long as the game lives. The balls, which sold in 1871 for mere songs, would, if put up at auction now, fetch many times as much money.

News comes from Chicago that Joe Quest, who at one time some years ago was a famous second baseman, is one of the heirs to an estate of $40,000,000 located somewhere beyond the Atlantic. To anybody but a ball player such news would be interesting. With ball players of experience, however, a little matter like that has no powers of excitement. Mr. Quest will probably fall into his millions (when he gets them) as naturally as a duck goes swimming and will not make half the noise about it which some of the players produced this spring when they were offered not more than $10 an hour for playing ball.

As a rule, more ball players fall heir to immoderate sized fortunes than any other class of citizens, and yet they manage somehow to keep in a state of financial solicitude. There are not many of the Quest family living, however, and if Joe gets a fair section of that $40,000,000 he should be able to keep up appearances among the playing princes of the National league, and now that the ice has been broken, as it were, we may expect to hear of many other retired players who expect to live luxuriously the remainder of their days on the wealth from over the sea to which they are heirs.

"YES?"

Of all fair women, grave or gay,
The one I oftenest bless
Is she who never fails to say
In tones inquiring, "Yes?"

Naught else so well a man can teach
His real thoughts to repress
And seal his lips and soul from speech
As this mild, neutral "Yes?"

Her charming grace I prize and praise,
Her worth, her loveliness,
And quite approve of all her ways
Except this maddening "Yes?"

Life must, I know, perplexing be
As baffling game of chess,
But any fate I'll brave if she
Will only not say "Yes?"

I oft resolve my woe to tell,
My grievance dire confess,
But—what's the use? I know quite well
She'll gently murmur "Yes?"

Few of Ezra Hinckley's friends and few of the village poor had ever taken a meal at his house, yet he was rich enough to have fed the hungry often "without feeling it," as his neighbors used to say. But one day a Frenchman, who did odd jobs about the town, found his way to Ezra's heart.

Ezra rebuffed him once, but after that he gave orders that whenever Antoine came he should have the best the kitchen afforded.

One night at dinner, after the soup was removed, he sat for some moments looking in pleased anticipation into the face of a beautifully browned little roast pig.

Suddenly he heard a movement. He looked up. There stood Antoine.

"Pardon, monsieur, I see I interrupt a tete-a-tete!" said the Frenchman and retired.—Youth's Companion.

THE CONSULTING PHYSICIAN OF THE
FRANCE MEDICAL AND SURGICAL INSTITUTE,
33 & 40 W. Gay St., one block N. of State House, Columbus, O. Incorporated, 1886. Capital, $300,000.

DRS. FRANCE AND OTTMAN, of New York, the well known and successful Specialists in Chronic Diseases and Diseases of the Eye and Ear, on account of their large practice in Ohio, have established the FRANCE MEDICAL INSTITUTE, where all forms of Chronic, Nervous and Private Diseases will be successfully treated on the most Scientific principles. They are ably assisted by a full corps of eminent Physicians and Surgeons, each one being a well known specialist in his profession
CANCER positively cured without pain or use of the knife, by a new method.
IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—DR. FRANCE, after years of experience, has discovered the greatest cure known for all diseases peculiar to the sex. Female diseases positively cured by the new remedy, OLIVE BLOSSOM. The cure is effected by home treatment. Entirely harmless and easily applied. Consultation Free and Strictly Confidential. Correspondence promptly answered.

YOUNG MEN—Who have become victims of solitary vice, that dreadful and destructive habit, which annually sweeps to an untimely grave thousands of young men of exalted talent and brilliant intellect, may call with confidence.
DRS. FRANCE AND OTTMAN, after years of experience, have discovered the greatest cure known for weakness in the back and limbs, involuntary discharges, impotency, general debility, nervousness, languor, confusion of ideas, palpitation of the heart, timidity, trembling, dimness of sight, or giddiness, diseases of the head, throat, nose, or skin, affections of the liver, lungs, stomach, or bowels—those terrible disorders arising from the solitary vice of youth—and secret practices, blighting their most radiant hopes or anticipations, rendering marriage impossible. Take one candid thought before it is too late. A week or month may place your case beyond the reach of hope. Our method of treatment will speedily and permanently cure the most obstinate case, and absolutely restore perfect manhood.
TO MIDDLE-AGED MEN.—There are many from the age of 30 to 60 who are troubled with frequent evacuations of the bladder, often accompanied by a slight burning or smarting sensation, weakening the system in a manner the patient cannot account for. On examination of the primary deposits, a ropy sediment will be found, or the color will be a thin or milkish hue. There are many men who die of this difficulty, ignorant of the cause, which is a second stage of seminal weakness. We will guarantee a perfect cure in all such cases, and a healthy restoration of the genito-urinary organs.
DISEASES OF WOMEN.—We have a special department, thoroughly organized, and devoted exclusively to the treatment of diseases of women. Every case consulting our specialists, whether by letter or in person, is given the most careful and considerate attention. Important cases (and we get few which have not baffled the skill of all the home physicians) have the benefit of a full council of skilled specialists. In treatment of diseases peculiar to females, our success has been marked, over two thirds of our patients being ladies, old, young, married, single, rich and poor. Our method is entirely free from objectionable features of the general practitioner, namely, "Local treatment." We seldom find it necessary. We prepare remedies, constitutional and local, as the case demands, and instruct ladies how to treat themselves.
MARRIAGE.—Married persons, or young men contemplating marriage, aware of physical weakness, loss of procreative powers, impotency, or any other disqualification, speedily restored.
PRIVATE DISEASES.—Blood Poison, Venereal Taint, Gleet, Stricture, Seminal Emissions, Loss of Sexual Power, Weakness of Sexual Organs, Want of Desire in Male or Female, whether from imprudent habits of youth or sexual habits of mature years, or any cause that deobstructes the sexual functions, speedily and permanently cured. Consultation free and strictly confidential. Absolute cures guaranteed. Medicines sent free from observation to all parts of the United States.
EPILEPSY, OR FITS—Positively cured by a new and never-failing method. Testimonials furnished.

FREE EXAMINATION OF THE URINE.—Each person applying for medical treatment should send or bring from 2 to 4 ounces of urine (that passed first in the morning preferred, when it will receive a careful chemical and microscopical examination, and if requested a written analysis will be given.

Ex-Congressman Ohliger can show the youngsters in politics a thing or two. Well, he will make a good collector and can draw the salary just as gracefully as anybody. Good for Mr Ohliger!

The discovery of obstructions on the street railway track on Ying'ling's hill, on two occasions, shows that some inhuman wretch is at work, and that no efforts should be spared to trace his identity. No punishment sufficiently severe could be inflicted upon such a villian.

It is not a very nice thing to say, but a good many people are thinking that it would have been very satisfactory had Benjamin Harrison been called upon to deliver the speech that fell to the lot of Mr. Cleveland yesterday General Harrison would have said something as brilliant as the exposition.

The Wayne county Democracy are having a row and a rumpus on account of the "revolutionary" act of the executive committee calling a primary election without consulting the executive committee. Already an injunction has been asked of the court to restrain the committee from issuing the call The fur is flying now at a lively rate.

Some of the Central Ohio papers are mentioning Hon. L. C Cole as a Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor. Well, why not? Wood county can furnish a creditable candidate for any place on the ticket, but we do not want the earth, and Cole for lieutenant governor would satisfy us this year —Bowling Green Democrat.

By all means nominate Leander Caesar. THE INDEPENDENT is greatly in favor of having the Democratic party place Mr. Cole second on the ticket.

Captain Wiltse, whose death was recorded the other day, died of a broken heart. "Taking down the American flag at Honolulu brought on the third attack of apoplexy, causing his death," said a gentleman who was one of his most intimate friends, and who was talking with him a short time before he died "What makes you think so?" he was asked "I don't think so, I know it to be a fact," he answered "He told me it was a shock to him and that he could never get over it, and he never did"

Tammany is the ruling Democratic force in New York, and the Democratic World says: "The important appointments made by Mayor Gilroy yesterday leave no doubt of his purpose to make the government of this city a rule of Tammany, for Tammany and by Tammany Nearly all the fifteen appointees are men with whom politics is a business and office holding a profession. The most of them are active Tammany leaders, without any education or any special qualifications for the places they are to fill. Several of them are men of previous or present bad character."

It is a somewhat impressive fact that in 1865, when the tax duplicate of Ohio aggregated $162,165,586 the personal property included amounted to $72,296,834 Since that year the total amount of personal property returned for taxation, has steadily decreased until in 1892, with a total duplicate of $238,753,750, the aggregate of personal property was but $54 796,170 A committee from the general assembly of New York, reporting on a similar condition in that state said: "We confess a considerable change of heart from the opinions at first entertained by us when we say that the proposition to relieve personal property from taxation presents a problem which we are well satisfied is worthy of careful study, but to which we do not feel warranted in giving our present assent, further than in the direction recommended."

STEUBENVILLE, O., May 2 — The striking Welshmen at the Irondale tin plate mill have returned to work Messrs. Wallace and Duff, of the company, visited Irondale last week and held a conference with Manager Banfield The Welsh say that the company granted them all they asked, and the company's officials have nothing to say. The trouble was over the American-born apprentices, whom the company were trying to introduce The Welshmen are determined to allow no Americans to learn the trade. On this matter there has been no definite agreement reached between the company and the strikers.

If the company should concede that no American born apprentices are to be employed, they should be ashamed of themselves. The Welsh usually make our very best citizens but the latest arrivals certainly do not sustain the reputation of their countrymen who have been here longer.

Every American takes patriotic pride, to day, in knowing that the Columbian Exposition is at last open, and that it is the greatest and most marvelous exhibition the world has ever known It has cost thirty three millions of dollars, but its glories are not measured by its cost, but by its artistic worth and the broad spirit of its conception. Somebody has called it the Dream City. It is foredoomed to extinction, and the certainty of its destruction enhances its present value. It is something to see and to remember It is nothing if not American, yet it is always and in everything cosmopolitan. After years of grubbing in political soil this is the magnificent blossom The best that we have in architecture, art and industry has been given to Chicago. At last we have something to rank among the world's wonders, to silence even foreign critics, and to live in history forever. This is a day on which the eagle may scream and the orator become grandiloquent. We are proud of Chicago, proud of ourselves, and proudest of all of our great World's Fair.

SCIENTIFIC INFORMATION.

The Cincinnati Commercial Gazette and the Toledo Blade are carrying on a learned discussion concerning meteorites. The Cincinnati paper insists that meteorites are long range shots from the volcanoes on the moon. The Blade, on the contrary, says that if this were so, the ejected volcanic matter would have to be driven out with enough force to carry it thousands of miles into space— that is, to a point at which the attraction of the earth is greater than that of the moon; otherwise, it would drop back to the moon. Tremendous as is the energy of volcanic eruption at times, such enormous force as would be required to do this is inconceivable.

The view concerning meteoric stones which is now generally accepted, and which certainly fits in well with the latest investigations as to comets and cometary matter, is that there are streams of meteorites—the chips and fragments of the universe—traveling around the sun in orbits—not planetary orbits, but apparently cometary ones Several of these orbits intersect that of the earth, and when one planet reaches that point there is a rapid increase in the number of meteors observed.

THE ANTIOCH MAN'S INVENTION.

Some chap in Antioch, California, has invented what he calls the rigorphone. His name is withheld for good and sufficient reasons, but he kindly tells us all about his device, and here are the particulars:

"He has discovered that he can take an insulated wire and store sounds upon it, to be tapped for future use whenever desired. He takes a small coil of the tiniest insulated wire, talks his message upon it and then stores it away for future use. To one end of the wire he attaches a small diaphragm which is no larger than a pants button, and to the other end of the wire he attaches a non-conductor He talks through the button, which he calls a diaphragm, and charges the wire with sound. He then removes the button and attaches tiny non-conductors to both ends of the wire and whatever the message may be it is stored for keeps. He can then put the coil of wire in his vest pocket, or send it away in an envelope through the mails, and the message always remains stored in that wire ready for use.

"When you want to take the message off the wire all you have to do is to attach the button or diaphragm to the end of the wire that was attached to the non-conductor when the wire received the message, hold the button to your ear and the entire message will come off with the same speed and in the same tone in which it was transmitted in the first place. After the message is exhausted you can again charge the wire with another message, just as you did in the first place, and, in fact, the wire can be continued in use indefinitely."

The ingenuity of the unknown Antioch man deserves to be sculptured in marble and graven in brass, and in this the Columbian year, it will not do to be skeptical concerning the reality of the invention.

The New Base Ball League.

The meeting of the Ohio State League of Base Ball clubs was held at Mansfield yesterday and resulted in the formation of the "O. and M." League, otherwise the Ohio and Michigan League of Base Ball Clubs. The double title resulted from the admission to the league of Bay City and Saginaw, Mich, and the two Michigan cities, together with Akron, Mansfield, Canton and Sandusky, will comprise the new six club league An eight club league will be formed if Springfield can induce Columbus to enter the league by May 10, but the league will probably result in the six club league as named.

Given Four Years.

Edward Davis, the man whose arrest at Dalton for horse stealing caused such a stir there last week, entered a plea of guilty, and was sentenced to four years in the penitentiary by Judge Dowell, at Wooster. He charged his trouble to drink and denied belonging to a gang of horse thieves. He also confessed to stealing a horse and buggy from Wm. Hoff at Funhing, O., and a buggy from a woman near Medina. These crimes, he said, he had committed while on a big drunk.

NOW RUSHING BUSINESS.

THE NEW COUNCIL GETS DOWN TO HARD WORK.

A Dozen and One Important Subjects Brought Up and Disposed of. Mr. Shoemaker Wants the Local Cars to Have the Right of Way.

The members of the city council passed more resolutions at their meeting last night than the average young man does on New Year's day. Every chair was occupied, President Hering and President pro tem. Young each taking a turn with the gavel.

THE PETITIONERS REBUKED.

A petition from several Prospect street property owners was read, in which the council was asked to allow Contractor Lemmon to pave that thoroughare with brick at his lowest bid, viz, $1.09 per square yard. President Hering took occasion to speak in very strong terms of the action of the property owners in bringing such a petition at this late day after the matter had been settled and all preliminaries have been finished, and the contractor almost ready to proceed with the work. He concluded by moving that the petition be laid on the table. Carried, Mr. Segner voting no.

RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolutions were introduced and adopted:

By Mr. Matthews—Instructing the paving and grading committee to have a stone crossing laid across West Main street at the intersection of Waechter street.

By Mr Young—Instructing the engineer to prepare plans and profiles and an estimate of the cost of sewering State street from Center to Akron street.

By Mr Matthews—Providing for the construction, under the direction of the proper committee, of a combination stone crossing over Walnut street at the intersection of Duncan

By Mr. Cameron—That the paving and grading committee proceed with the improvement of East Oak street by awarding the contract for grading that street to John Geis.

By Mr Segner—That it is necessary for the property owners on both sides of East street, from the Ft. Wayne railroad crossing to Richville avenue, to lay sawed stone sidewalks in front of their properties.

By Mr. Young—That the matter of repairing a certain gutter in Paul street to prevent the accumulation of storm water be referred to the paving and grading committee with the power to have the work done at a cost not to exceed $15

By Mr Matthews—Instructing the engineer to prepare an estimate of the cost of grading Jarvis avenue

By Mr. Matthews—That the clerk notify the Pennsylvania Railway Company that permission to cross West Main street with its new double tracks will be refused by the council unless a bond is given by the company making it liable for any damage which may result to property owners. Mr. Shoemaker voting no.

By Mr Cameron—Instructing the sewer committee to proceed with the work of laying a storm water sewer from a point opposite Reed & Co.'s glass works in Canal street to the Tuscarawas river.

By Mr. Hering—That the city solicitor be instructed to revise, rearrange and codify all existing ordinances of the city of Massillon and have them placed in book form at a cost not to exceed $500. The solicitor is given until September 1, 1893 to finish the above work Messers Lucius and Young voted no to this resolution.

TO ENTERTAIN THE FIREMEN.

Peter Smith, Wm Rohr and John Youngblood, who compose a committee appointed for the purpose by the members of the Massillon Volunteer Firemen's Association, presented a petition in which they request the council to donate $150 for the purpose of assisting in the payment of the expense of entertaining the delegates to the annual convention of the Ohio Volunteer Firemen's Association on May 10 On motion of Mr Lucius, the communication was unanimously accepted and the request granted

Immediately after the above action, an invitation to the council to attend the convention named, and to take part in the firemen's parade on May 10, was read, and on motion of Mr. Segner it was decided to accept the same and attend in a body.

RECOMMENDED A NEW SEWER.

A communication signed by the president and secretary of the sewer commission was read, in which it was stated that at a recent meeting of that body it had been decided to recommend the construction in West Charles and Canal streets, in sewer district No. 1, of a lateral sewer with the proper house connections. Accepted, and the engineer ordered to make an estimate of the cost of the work

A letter from the Norwalk agent of the Austin M'f'g Co., of Chicago, was read, in which an offer is made to furnish the city with a street sweeper for trial, the city to pay $450, less the freight charges, in case the machine is purchased.

Died at Richville.

Mrs. Ora Metzger, wife of Clarke Metzger, died Sunday afternoon at 12:30 o'clock at the home of her husband's father, Adam Metzger, in Richville, after a week's illness of sciatic rheumatism She was a daughter of Elisha Martin, of Grape street, this city, and was 23 years old. Beside her husband, a nine weeks' old son survives her. Her marriage to Mr. Metzger occurred about one year ago.

THE CLUB LADIES ENTERTAIN.

A Delightful Tea and Card Party Last Night.

The tea and card party given at the Massillon Club by the ladies of the club was attended by about eighty members, last night, and the evening passed off so smoothly and pleasantly, as to bring golden congratulations to the committee of management, consisting of Mrs. Steese, Mrs Montgomery and Mrs. Charles M Russell Tea was served at 6 o'clock in the ball room, where the twenty tables, on the glistening floor, and covered with the and rarest of china whitest of napery, made as pretty a supper room as taste could devise Guests found partners before ascending, by matching numbers which had been issued in duplicate, and found their mates marked in the same manner. The girls of the club volunteered as waitresses, and made the supper go off like clock work.

The ball room was abandoned just long enough to arrange the card tables, nineteen being required to accommodate those who remained to play. The games were conducted according to the established rules, and eighteen were played. After the final reckoning, and the question of precedence had settled down to half a dozen, the matter was settled by cutting, and Mrs Pocock was thereupon awarded a dainty paper basket as first ladies' prize, and Mr Harry McLain a silver fruit knife as the first men's prize Mrs. E S. Wright and Mrs A J. Ricks, of Cleveland, and Mrs. Edward Merwin, of Ripon, Wis, were present

Late in the evening the fragments of the feast were gathered up and sold by auction, amidst great excitement The club tea party was a brilliant success, and everybody hopes that it was only the first of a series of similar gatherings.

SEVENTY-FIVE LOCOMOTIVES

They Will Soon Be Installed in Massillon.

Master of Transportation F J Stout, of the Wheeling & Lake Erie management, now writes Massillon after his name, when he register at the Conrad Mr. Stout says that people here have miscalculated the extent of the business about to be brought to Massillon, as a result of the establishment of division terminals at this point Figures previously given, he says, are misleading The freight now being moved is heavier than at any period in the road's history, and it is growing The company now owns seventy five locomotives. Every one of them will have headquarters at Massillon. For each locomotive there will be one engineer, one fireman, an engine hostler and an average train crew of three persons. This makes a total of 450, and does not include the permanent yard force, repair mechanics, telegraphers and general officers.

One of the necessities which must be provided for is a cheap hotel or boarding house on the Runser farm, without a bar, capable of accommodating not less than 100 men The company may conclude to build such a hotel and lease it to a manager However, if the right man should come forward, he could secure ground rent free of cost, by erecting a hotel of the sort described, within a given time.

WHO IS THE VILLAIN?

Another Attempt to Wreck an Inter Urban Car.

Another unsuccessful attempt to wreck an inter-urban was made on Saturday night. As the motor "Massillon." which is due in this city at 7:15, was passing through the Yengling hill switch, Motorman Joe Hallas noticed several large stones laid upon the track. He succeeded in slacking the speed of the car enough to prevent its being thrown from the track. Had the car struck the stones at the rate it had been going, considerable damage and a long delay would have been the result. At about the same time the city car No. 33, in charge of Motorman F L. Bullion, which runs to the bottom of the hill, struck a large plank which had been laid across the track, but luckily the car had almost come to a standstill and did not leave the track.

The obstructions must have been placed on the rails by the same person or persons, who, thinking if one failed to wreck the car perhaps the next would prove more successful The matter will be looked into and the guilty person punished if possible.

The man who called sarsaparilla a fraud, had good reason: for he got hold of a worthless mixture at "reduced rates." He changed his opinion, however, when he began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla It pays to be careful, when buying medicine.

Serious Railroad Accident.

Milk trains in collision, no milkman turns up, disappointed house keepers, coffee without cream. A pretty annoyance resulting from a neglect to keep the Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk in the house. Order now for future exigencies from grocer or druggist.

I have been bothered with catarrh for about twenty years; I had lost sense of smell entirely, and I had almost lost my hearing. My eyes were getting so dim I had to get some one to thread my needle. Now I have my hearing as well as I ever had, and I can see to thread as fine a needle as ever I did, my sense of smell is partly restored, and it seems to be improving all the time I think there is nothing like Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh. GETTING READY TO BUILD

THAT C., L. & W. STRAIGHT LINE TO CLEVELAND.

Details Being Perfected for an Extension From Mallet Creek Into the Forest City—The Erie May Be Interested in the Scheme.

CLEVELAND, May 2.—The Cleveland Southwestern is to be the name of the next railway leading into this city. It is a line which has already been mentioned as intended to run from Mallet Creek, the first station north of Medina on the Cleveland, Lorain & Wheeling railroad, in an almost direct line to Brooklyn No arrangements have been made for getting into the center of the city, but it is thought that if no better route is presented, satisfactory terms can be agreed upon with the Valley railway, whereby the new company can come in along the line of the old canal bed.

The new road will ostensibly be operated by an independent company, but the new management of the Cleveland, Lorain & Wheeling will be in control. The company has not yet been incorporated, and it is considered likely that the Erie may get a share of the stock The new line will give the Erie a longed for outlet to its trunk line which will, it is said, save two and a half hours' time over the existing arrangements with the Cleveland, Canton & Southern. The Erie's Cleveland passengers would travel over the new track to Mallet Creek, and thence over the C, L & W to Sterling which is the intersecting point of the C, L & W, with the Nypano. The only hinderance in the way of this sort of a traffic arrangement is the alliance of the Valley with the Nypano, which is not wholly eradicated by the receivership. This can probably be circumvented, however, in on one of the many ways known to railroad projectors and financiers

Wednesday.

CANTON, May 3.—An event of annual occurrence in Canton, is the May party given by the Assembly. These parties or rather balls, are the most important social entertainments of the year in Canton, and everything possible is done to make them successful. This year's May party was given last night, and though the attendance was somewhat smaller than heretofore it was, if possible, even more pleasant than any of its predecessors. The handsome Wernet Hall had been decorated and trimmed with pretty paper lanterns through which electric lights glimmered, and on the stage at the south end of the room, the Grand Army orchestra, without whose presence an Assembly ball could scarcely be imagined, sent forth music that was impossible to resist. Pretty faces and gowns were there in plenty, and to the masculine eye what more could be desired to make the evening enjoyable. Late in the evening a luncheon of sandwiches, olives and coffee was spread in an apartment adjoining the ball room. Among the guests were Colonel and Mrs. C V Hard, Mr and Mrs. Herman Kuhns, and Miss Shively, of Wooster; Miss Elizabeth Frease, Zanesville; Major Fred Bryan, of Akron; Lieutenant Johnson, of Alliance; the Misses Mary and Theodora Ricks, of Cleveland; and from Massillon, Mrs. James H Mclain, Miss Russell, Miss Harriet Russell, Miss Bayliss, Miss McCue, Miss Burton, Miss Albrecht and Messrs. Clarence, John and Walter McLain, Frank M. Atwater and Per Lee Hunt.

THE BEST PLAN.

W. A Lynch, when asked as to his views in the court house matter said he was in favor of the plans of Architect Hammond. "The court house needs improvement badly," Mr. Lynch continued, "and that soon. I was somewhat impressed at first with the scheme of selling the present site and erecting an entirely new building, but that would tie up the money too long. I think the project of building a wing the height of the present court house about the best plan."

Marriage licenses have been granted to Charles Stall and Lizzie Strigewalt, Andrew W. Kuntz and Mary Alice Susser, Delbert Hawkins and Matilda Johnson, Yans Lawson and Annie Christiansen, of Canton.

Hood's Pills cure liver ills, jaundice, biliousness, sick headache constipation.

Strong Witnesses.

Among the thousands of testimonials of cures by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, is that of Nathan Allisons, a well-known citizen of Glen Rock; Pa., who for years had shortness of breath, sleeplessness, pain in left side,, shoulders, smothing spells, etc,; one bottle of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and one box of Nerve and Liver Pills, cured him. Peter Jaquet, Salem, N. J., is another witness, who for twenty years suffered with Heart Disease, was pronounced incurable by physicians, death stared him in the face, could not lie down for fear of smothering to death. Imediately after using the New Cure he felt better and could lie down and sleep all night, and is now a well man. The New Cure is sold, also Free Book, by Z. T. Baltzly.

While working near the steam shovel the bank gave way and Seabrook, who was unable to escape, was buried to his neck in the sliding earth. Luckily help was near and beyond being badly squeezed he sustained no injuries.

At eight o'clock last night, Isaac Marks, while at work with the scrap shears at the rolling mill, was struck by a portion of the machine which had become loosened, and a bad cut two and one half inches long was made in the right wrist The wound penetrated to the bone and is very painful

The Canton-Massillon Electric Railway Company have withdrawn the communication filed over a week ago with the Navarre council, and its contents are unknown. Whether that company will have anything to do with the proceedings incident to the granting of a franchise through the village depends altogether on the way things turn at the next council meeting.

Nearly 5,000 feet of flooring and other lumber, piled in the new W. & L. E. yards, to be used in the office building which is now under course of construction, was carried away by the flood night before last. The workmen succeeded in securing some of it which was scattered along the banks, but the greater part was carried beyond reach and was lost

Mrs. Rachel Hasson, wife of Dr. Hasson, of Richville, died at her home in that place yesterday morning at 11 o'clock. Her age was 77 years, and beside her husband leaves three children, a daughter, who lives at her parents' home, a son who resides on a farm near Richville, and another son at Toledo. The funeral will take place from the house at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning, burial in the Massillon cemetery.

Jacob Mauger, the man who was arrested by Marshal Hagan on Monday, on a warrant sworn out by General Agent Killinger of the Canton-Massillon electric railway, charging the former with using profane and indecent language while on board a car, was given a trial in the mayor's court room yesterday afternoon. Mauger pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and the costs, in all amounting to about $50 by the mayor.

A small company of young married people were entertained by Mrs. C. H. Rudolph last night, in honor of her sister, Mrs. Harry Adams, of Canal Dover. The evening was pleasantly passed with progressive euchre, and at the conclusion of the twentieth game the winners, Mrs. C. S. Belknap and James Bayliss, were rewarded for their skill, the former receiving a coffee spoon and the latter a stick. Luncheon was served after the games.

ELECTED DIRECTORS.

The Annual Meeting of the Massillon Loan and Building Company.

The annual meeting of the stock holders of the Massillon Loan and Building Company was held in the office of Secretary Charles G. King last night There were three directors elected to serve three year terms Messrs Charles E. Oberlin, Warren E. Russell and J. O. Heggem were the only nominations for the positions, though blank spaces were left on the tickets for the insertion of the names of any other persons. Mr Oberlin received 329 votes, Mr Russell 325 and Mr. Heggem 324 A P. Conlon, though not a candidate, received four votes.

The usual custom of organizing the new board of directors was not observed, but was deferred until next Tuesday evening, at which time the board will elect a president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and attorney. The judges and clerks at last night's meeting were Messrs I. M. Taggart, L P Slusser, Wm. Hansen and A F Sprankle.

IT HAS BURST ITS BANKS

LIMA, May 3.—A break was discovered in the banks of the Lewistown reservoir, Logan county, this morning. The break is spreading and much damage is feared from the liberated water. The Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railway tracks are already submerged The reservoir contains 17,000 acres, and is the second largest artificial body of water in this country. From fifteen to twenty persons are reported drowned The break was discovered at 4 o'clock this morning.

MARRIED AT ST. JOSEPH'S.

A Pretty Wedding Ceremony Performed This Morning.

[From Wednesday's Daily.]

A large audience gathered in the handsome new St. Joseph's English Catholic church this morning, to witness a pretty marriage, which took place at half past 8 o'clock. The bride was Miss Laura Fultmor, daughter of Mr. Levi Fultmor, and the groom, William Seifert, a well known young employe of Russell & Co

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Thomas F. Mahon, the bridal party advancing to the altar to the strains of the Mendelssohn march, played by Mrs. Kerrigan The ushers, Messrs. Orlando and Elmor Volkmor, entered first, followed by two little maids of honor, Flora Waltz and Margery Miller, carrying flowers Then came the groom and his brother, Joseph Seifert, and finally the bride and her cousin, Miss Adelaide Volkmor, as maid

The bride's gown, which was very becoming, was of cream Lansdowne silk trimmed with lace, and she wore a wreath of cream roses and a veil Miss Volkmor also wore cream Lansdowne. After the ceremony the bridal party was driven to the home of the bride's father, east of the city, where 150 guests sat down to a fine dinner served on the large lawn surrounding the house, and are being entertained this afternoon Among those in attendance are a number of people from Canton and other places

The young couple received many handsome presents. They will reside in this city

GOOD FOR OHLIGER!

He Gets a Fine Soft Job at $4,500 a Year

The Canton News Democrat gives it out that ex-Congressman Ohliger, of Wooster, has been appointed collector of internal revenue for this, the 18th district, at a salary of $4,500 per year.

This is the fattest take that has been given out in this district by this administration and Mr. Ohliger is to be congratulated

His candidacy was not generally known in Stark county, but he is understood to be strong with the powers that be in Washington.

He has the control of a number of very desirable appointments, and for the benefit of our large Democratic clientage, we will enumerate the giddy gifts that will go to good Democrats of this locality.

First, there is the deputy; salary $1,900, a very soft snap. Then there are ten assistant deputies, all blubbery with fat, one with a salary of $1,200. 8 with a salary of $1,100 each, and one with the less enticing salary of $900. Then comes an easy clerkship with a salary of $1,200; then two additional clerks with a salary of $750 each, and one clerk with a salary of $700. Then comes the whisky gaugers, a position that requires an expert taste, and where the fees are ample In addition to all this, there are ten storekeepers and gaugers, to be appointed by Mr. Ohliger, who get from $2 to $3 50 per day, for the easiest kind of work.

We feel like saying that the working Democrats of Stark are entitled to a few of these soft places.

If not, why not?

He Says He is Innocent.

Jacob Mauger denies vehemently that he had anything to do with, or even knew anything about the attempted wreck of inter urban cars on the Yengling's hill grade. He says that he can prove by his family that after being ejected from the Canton car, Sunday, April 23, he reached home before the attempt could have been made. He says that he is altogether too kindhearted a man to contemplate so dastardly an act.

Company F Inspected.

At the armory last night, Major Fred Bryan, of Akron, inspected the members of Company F. They were put through the manual of arms and foot movements, and the equipments of the company and the armory were inspected and found to be in excellent condition.

For all forms of nasal catarrh where there is dryness of the air passages with what is commonly called "stuffing up," especially when going to bed, Ely's Cream Balm gives immediate relief. Its benfit to me has been priceless.—A. G. Case. M. D., Millwood, Kas.

THAT TEN CENT FARE.

IT STIRS UP THE NAVARRE VILLAGE COUNCIL.

A Prolonged Session Held Last Night—Action Deferred Until Friday Night—Mr. Lynch Presents a Communication—Mr. Young Was Not Present.

NAVARRE, O., May 3.—It was eight o'clock last night when the city dads filed into their chamber for the transaction of business Clerk Walker was out of town, and Councilman Loud was chosen clerk pro tem Mayor Welch scored the clerk gently for not keeping the records in the council chamber so that they could be had. Councilman Davy also scored him along the same line, and wanted to know "if one man could block the business of the council." There was a full attendance, both of the council and citizens. John F Grossklaus and F M. Corl were recommended by the mayor for reappointment as members of the board of health After a little other routine business, the important business of the evening was taken up: the electric street railway matter. W. A. Lynch and F. H. Killinger, of the Canton-Massillon company, were on hand. The representatives of the new or Massillon company were conspicuous by their absence. Clerk Walker had the sealed bids in his possession, and the council were rather handicapped as to proper procedure. At this juncture, Mr Lynch presented the following to the council:

MR. LYNCH'S LETTER.

CANTON, O., April 21, 1890.

To his Honor, the Mayor, and the Honorable Members of the Council of the Village of Navarre, O:

Gentlemen: As you are doubtless advised, the Canton-Massillon Electric Railway Company has secured the right of the extension of its Massillon city system to the northern corporation line of your village and has given bond to have the same completed within one year It is the desire of this company to secure means of access into your town, and it is the purpose of some of its principal stockholders to apply to you for a franchise to construct and operate a railway in your village, with the intention of connecting the same with the Canton-Massillon city system.

Ordinarily, parties desiring to secure street railway franchises determine in advance the location they wish to occupy and apply to property owners for consents required by the statute The present case is somewhat peculiar, however. We are informed that there are some differences of opinion as to the route in the village, as to the best wants of the people. We do not desire antagonizing any interests in the town and therefore deem it proper, in this instance, to depart from the usual course of procedure to this extent; that we would be glad to have the people and council, so far as they can, come to some agreement as to the proper route to be adopted, and with that view we would be pleased to have a conference with the council or a committee appointed for that purpose, at an early date, so that this question of route can be intelligently discussed; also the terms of franchise, which, of course, is a matter of vital importance to both parties

We make these suggestions because we believe this would give an opportunity for public sentiment in the village to crystalize and take definite form which, in our view is a result much to be desired In building a railroad into a village we need the general support of all its people The terms we offer in the matter of fare, all must agree, are exceedingly favorable. The exact line to be adopted is not much a matter of importance to us, as that it may meet the views and interests of the majority of your citizens Should the council see fit to take up the matter with us in this spirit we will be pleased to confer with you at your early convenience

Very respectfully,
WM A LYNCH.

MR. LYNCH MAKES SOME REMARKS

Mr. Lynch was then given an opportunity to address the council in reference to his letter. He made quite extended remarks, and said his company proposed to carry passengers from any point in Navarre to any point in Massillon for five cents, and that they would like to get the matter of franchise settled at once, so they could go ahead with constructing the road, and said if the weather would permit the line would be in operation in July. He said the ordinance passed by our council at a previous meeting was illegal and advised them to undo all that had been done and commence new, but in this the council did not take his advice

Whilst he was speaking Clerk Walker arrived, and then the bids of the Massillon company were opened and read. Their bid was five cents per passenger over the route in the village, and that at no time should the fare exceed ten cents to Massillon. Their bid over the inter-urban route, or over the plains, was five cents to Main street in Massillon. Their bids were accompanied by the consents of property owners along the routes. The clerk also read the following letter:

MR. YOUNG'S LETTER.

MASSILLON, O., April 29, 1890.

E. J Walker, Clerk.

DEAR SIR—I regret very much that you did not have your council meeting on Friday night. I leave to-morrow for Toledo, where the death of a nephew and other important business matters call me. If we are not present on Tuesday night, and Messrs. Warwick and Humberger do not make different arrangements, have the council open bids, and if the council sees fit to accept the same, have the ordinance, which I handed you, read the first time, and let the matter pend until your next meeting, for I now know that it will be impossible for me to be present. At any rate, it may be to the best interests of Navarre to fully consider every phase of the street car question.

Very truly yours,
[Dictated.] OTTO E. YOUNG.

SOME MORE LETTERS.

Mr. Lynch then presented separate communications to the council from Benjamin Doll, R. Sprankle and the Dunbar heirs, revoking the consents they had given to Messrs. Humberger, Steese, Warwick and Young. He also produced a map and affidavit from Ex County Surveyor Holl, showing the number of feet frontage between Massillon and Navarre and the owners thereof. He also claimed that any company to bid for the franchise from Navarre to Massillon must have consents aggregating 16,602 feet He also raised the point that the members of the syndicate controlling a portion of the asylum grounds had no legal right to sign consents, as it was within the province of the four trustees to do so; he also objected to certain consents read including a portion of cemetery lands

He claimed that the Massillon company had no legal right to make bids as they lacked 2 335 feet of having a majority of the feet frontage, including in their consents the cemetery and J R. Sprankle Mr Lynch objected to them claiming the consent of J R. Sprankle as it was given in a private letter to I B. Pocock, at the time a member of the village council. He advised the council to reject the bids as they were not legal

THE COUNCIL AT SEA

The council was somewhat at sea as to just what ought to be done under the circumstances, and Councilman Davy moved that the council go into committee of the whole, which was carried After retiring to an ante-room for twenty minutes they returned, and Loud introduced the following resolution:

Owing to the absence of certain interested persons, I move this matter be deferred to Friday evening next The motion prevailed Foster moved that the council accept the invitation of Mr. Lynch and confer with him as to route, terms of franchise, etc., on Friday evening. Motion prevailed, and council adjourned.

NOTES OF THE EVENING

L Q Hoover and Editor Stucker, of Massillon, were the visiting quill shovers present,

It was regretted by the friends of the Massillon company that Mr Young was not present to hold up his end of the string.

The matter of route in Navarre will wax warm before it is settled. Of one thing rest assured: it will never be built up Canal street across Navarre square; and further, the citizens and business men in West Navarre demand, and justly, some recognition.

As a compromise on the route question, how would it do to run down Basin street to Canal street? This would be getting pretty close to Rochester, and would in no wise interfere with any business street.

KORHLEY.

They Richly Deserved It.

A warrant sworn out by Humane Officer Fred. Hose was served yesterday afternoon by Constable Shepley on Elmer Jones and another on John Lung this morning The men appeared before Justice Paul and pleaded guilty to the charge of cruelty to animals They were fined $10 and costs. The charge was brought about by the brutal action of the fellows in driving to death a horse on East Main street on Monday afternoon In an account of the case, yesterday, this paper mentioned Wm Jones as being connected with the affair. Mr. Jones desires it stated that it was Elmer Jones and not himself who was implicated

THEIR PICKS ARE IDLE.

OHIO'S COAL MINES ARE ALL SILENT TO-DAY.

The Strike Inaugurated Against the Advice of President McBride What He Says About It. The Views of Massillon Operators on the Situation

COLUMBUS, May 3.—The picks of 20,000 Ohio miners will be idle to day unless they are used by non union hands. This was decided upon at the delegate conference in this city of miners representing every local union in the state. The session continued until a late hour Saturday afternoon The strike is ordered under remarkable and unprecedented circumstances. The delegates came instructed to vote for a strike, and notwithstanding dissuasive arguments, which finally assumed the nature of appeals from state and national officers, the representative miners had no other alternative National President John McBride, who lay sick in his bed at the hotel, sent a letter to the conference advising against a strike National Secretary McBryde and State President Nugent pleaded with the men for several hours, but all was of no avail

The officers think that the miners have made the mistake of their life, as it is positive that miners of other states and competitive districts will not go out. The miners' officers think it is not possible for the men to win so long as there is not concerted act on over the entire competitive district which includes Pennsylvania, Indiana, West Virginia, and Illinois There are 20,000 miners in this state, and all of these will go out on Monday They demanded an increase of five cents a ton for pick and ten cents for machine mining, and the operators say that it is no use for them to consider any such proposition

This strike serves to direct attention to the Workman arbitration law, passed by the recent legislature The law provides that within thirty days from the appointment of two arbitrators they shall select a third, on a failure to agree within that period, the governor is to name the third member The thirty days have now almost expired and when questioned to night Private secretary Boyle said that there was nothing certain as yet about Hon Charles Foster accepting the appointment This leaves matters in a precidicament where the law could not be availed of, even were the parties of the imminent strike so disposed.

PRESIDENT JOHN M'BRIDE

President John McBride, of the United Mine Workers of America, who advised through a letter sent from his sick bed in Columbus to the miners assembled in convention in that city on Saturday against striking for an advance, reached home yesterday. When asked by THE INDEPENDENT this morning whether the provisions of the new Workman law referring to a state board of arbitration the question of wages, would be resorted to in the present case, he replied that he could not say just now.

"I do not," he continued, "think the strike will be of very long duration. The delegates to the Columbus convention can scarcely be blamed for their action in voting to hold out for an advance, as in so doing they were merely carrying out instructions received previous to the decision of the Pennsylvania miners, who voted not to strike

"All the mines of this district, number ing about twenty, are now shut down Yes, it is probable that a state convention will soon be called for the purpose of discussing the matter. There will also, I suppose, be preliminary meetings of the various local associations I am in hopes that an amicable and early settlement can be effected and I believe that it will be for the relations between the miners and their employers are at present of a friendly nature."

The Situation Unchanged.

Assistant Mine Inspector John P. Jones, of North Lawrence, was in town this morning, and when asked if there was anything new in regard to the strike said that as far as he knew no action had yet been taken by the miners toward calling local meetings. He added that the miners are in good shape to remain out for a protracted time, as they have worked steadily for several months past and are, therefore, prepared financially for a prolonged siege. President McBride, of the United Mine Workers, and mine operator Howells were also seen and both said that there have been no developments in the situation today.

NYE IN SANTA CLAUS.

HE SAYS HE IS UNFITTED FOR THE LIFE OF A MONK.

The Lady Who Was Anxious to See a Dog Which Recalls an Incident In William' Paris Career—Eating a Tomale—How Walton Was Saved.

[Copyright, 1893, by Edgar W. Nye.]

SANTA CLAUS, Cal., April.

The old missions of California are a great treat. I have visited a number of them. At first I thought they were built and operated for the entertainment of excursionists, but I now find that they are genuine and do much good.

ACCOMPANIED BY SEVERAL ATTRACTIVE LADIES.

The mission at Santa Barbara is an elderly building of some size, and inside of the monastery through the iron barred windows monks may be observed engaged in "monking," as Mr. Barnabee might say.

Inside the chapel a middle aged monk was dusting the nave with a feather duster and polishing the hard benches so as to make it more difficult to sit on them. By and by perhaps he will make it impossible. I trust so. At present each attendant supplies his own "rozzum."

Several attractive ladies accompanied me, and when the monk heard their voices he turned, looked the other way and said something to himself. A man can't be too careful that way if he be connected with the monking industry.

Only two women have ever crossed the threshold of the monastery proper. They were Princess Louise and Mrs. Harrison. Ever since then the brotherhood have been engaged in trying to overcome this by a rigid course of devotions worthy of a better cause.

Looking over the rules required of these monks, I can see how eminently unfitted I am for such a life. Nothing could be more widely different than their lives and the gay, butterfly existence I now lead, flitting as I do from place to place, pausing only here and there to earn an honest dollar if possible, but taking silver, of course, in some instances here on the coast.

I do not know exactly how old these missions are, but they are pretty old and rather picturesque. There should be better facilities there for the tourist to drop a shilling in the box for the aid of the mission, for they would not mind it. They get accustomed to the act of contributing to most everything as they go along.

One lady of our party is very fond of dogs. She found that there was a collection of these animals stopping at Redlands. It was a troop of educated dogs seeking to elevate the stage. They were spending the Sabbath at a livery stable there, having played to S. R. O. (standing room only) at San Bernardino on Saturday evening.

The lady was anxious to see them, and so asked a large man in a white hat and shirt sleeves who was oiling a buggy if he could tell her where they were. He opened a door, took down a fence and helped her find them after some trouble. When she came away, she gave him a shilling for his trouble, but he said the dogs were not his, and that it was no trouble, etc. When she got to the hotel, she found that he was one of the most wealthy men in the state.

This reminds me of an incident which occurred when I was in France. My letter of credit was payable at the main bank of the Credit Lyonnaise, a very thriving concern with branches all over Europe. I used to go to this bank very often, as it is very kind to Americans and has beautiful reading and writing parlors and a night school for wealthy Americans who wish to learn reading and writing, but who have never had time to attend to it.

I was always waited upon by one of the officials, who was extremely courteous to me. His name was M. Trozeaulebong. When I came away one day, I expressed my gratitude to him, and from force of habit alone pressed into his palm a 5-franc piece. He accepted it with a Lewy Quadroon bow, and as he placed it with his other francs in his purse he said: "Perhaps monsieur has no engagements for tomorrow—Sunday—if so would he honor me with a visit to my country place near Versailles? I should be most joyful to call for him at his address with my drag in the morning, and monsieur could remain at Versailles until Monday if he chose."

I accepted more out of curiosity than anything else and found an establishment that threw my North Carolina bungalow entirely in the shade. He was an excellent host and pressed me so hard to remain that the creases in my trousers could be seen for two weeks.

I was pained last week to read his name in the reports of the Panama affair and can hardly believe that he is the man. It must be some other M. Trozeaulebong, I think.

Yesterday I ate a tomale.

The tomale, if well made, is said to be very toothsome, but unprincipled Portuguese and Greasers sometimes make them of inferior material. They are made of chicken and hot things chopped up together and rolled in a corn husk. Then they are heated in an alcohol stove and kept hot by men who sell them to the credulous throng.

When chickens are scarce, the sea gull is used. That was the kind I got. I am not enough of an ornithologist to select tamales.

Designing people might make them out of weathercocks or other deciduous fowls and fool me sadly. A man who is not an ornithologist should shun the tomale unless he has faith and a stomach which will not turn when trodden upon.

California has more attractions than any other state in the Union, but the climate was about a month later than usual this year, and several people perished from exposure. Living here is cheap. Workingmen can get good board at the large hotels at $6 to $18 per day, with coal at $1 per hod. Horse hire is extra. Dogs are not allowed to play in the halls or to eat at the regular table with guests.

Monterey probably has the best hotel in the state except Saugus. Saugus is an eating joint where your meals are prepared while you wait—while you wait four hours for the Los Angeles train for San Francisco.

There is nothing at Saugus but the eating house and a few cases of colic under the same management. The passengers in our entire car, excepting a man from New Haven, ate lunch there and were poisoned by something they ate there. Probably it was the canned vegetables which are used at that place and are obtained from the east, I judge, in exchange for oranges and lemons.

Our car was the scene of the wildest commotion all night, and several of the passengers were ill for 10 days afterward.

I do not know how the employees at Saugus live. Probably their meals are brought to them from Los Angeles.

There are many pleasant hotels in California, but when crowded, as they are at this season, of course they have to work hard to please people, and they cannot always succeed. It would be well to engage rooms several weeks ahead if the reader is coming to the coast.

I never saw such a rush in search of health in my life. It takes a pretty healthy person to go in search of his health, I often think.

The train ahead of ours had 15 sleeping cars and 3 engines, besides the coaches. The sleeping cars were so full, too, that in one car, filled almost entirely by ladies, they were dressing for over 350 miles in the morning. One lady had to brush her hair on the Oakland ferry. She said that when she comes on earth again she hopes she will be a Chinaman.

One finds the Chinese here quite frequently. They are divided by naturalists into two classes- viz, male and female. The female Chinaman goes bareheaded. The male wears a hat. Lately the Chinese have been pretty busy assassinating each other and thus endearing themselves to the people of San Francisco.

(I am writing this letter at a table in the reading room of the hotel, and a man with "the whole arm movement" is writing at the other side of the table. I judge that he learned to write on the side of a large, heavy barn that had been secured by mortgage or something, so that it could not move much while he was writing. The table is already bowlegged trying to follow the thread of his remarks.)

Recently I met Mr. Hatch, the biggest fruitgrower on the coast, I am told. He began to hort about 18 years ago and was reputed to have at that time about $10,000, but taking me by the arm and leading me out to the Cliff House, where the sound of the breakers drowned his voice, he admitted to me that he did not have that much.

HE ACCEPTED.

Now he is getting an income of $365,000 per year—$1,000 per day for the year, including Sundays. Every four years, when there is an extra day with no income, the poor man eats an orange.

This proves that any young man with perseverance and $10,000 may in 18 years by industry and economy, and by knowing as much as Mr. Hatch, provided the red scale does not break out on a large scale in his orchards, be far beyond the reach of want.

It was thought for many years that Mr. Hatch was the author of the piece entitled "Monuments of Human Grandeur Perish," but afterward it was discovered that he copied it from a Fourth Reader.

During the busy season Mr. Hatch is compelled to hire help in picking the fruit, while he attends to the packing and arrangement of the large, juicy fruit which one notices on the top of the basket.

All kinds of trees grow in this state, especially tropical and subtropical trees. The date tree grows here, and at the right season busy men may be seen standing on a stepladder in the rich foliage canceling their dates. The pepper tree, the camphor tree, the banana tree, the breadfruit tree and the oyster cracker tree all grow here in abundance and are pointed out to one by the driver, who is generally a pretty fertile man himself.

Some think that all the great liars go to perdition. This is a mistake. They go to Yosemite and drive teams there.

One of them said that down the road a little "furder" he would show us a strange sight. It was a big hole in a tree. The tree was one of the Miamosa trifoliatum giganticum, if my memory serves me at all creditably. This tree during a continued rain, which sometimes occurs in the Yosemite, expands, the cells filling with water rapidly and enlarging.

Daniel Walton, a low and vulgar man, was hunting through the valley in the spring of 1878 with ill success, having killed nothing but grizzly bears, all of which were too large to tote home. As he came up the valley a heavy rain set in, and it came on to rain, as it sometimes does in the rainless region of California. Seeing that it was growing worse, Walton stepped into this hole in the tree, and unbuckling a large thermal belt which he wore and which contained cartridges he laid it aside and soon went to sleep. When he awoke, he was surprised to see that the hole was almost closed up by the swelling of the wood cells of the tree. He was greatly alarmed, for he had no means whatever by which to escape from the tree and did not know when the storm would cease. He feared that he would become a part of the tree possibly and some day be put into a sideboard or the top of a bar counter perhaps. He fired his rifle several times out of the hole, but did not kill anything. As darkness came on and he felt the pangs of hunger gnawing at his vitals he heard footsteps passing by and rightly judged that the author of them could not be far away. Looking out through the aperture, he saw a man and spoke to him in a glad tone. The voice, coming out of a knothole not wholly closed up yet, startled the man, for he feared it was something supernatural. The man's name was Rodgers—Lou Rodgers, they called him. He ran at first, but Walton begged him so all piteously that he paused and went back.

"What is the matter?" he exclaimed.

"Matter enough," retorted Walton, trying to get a piece of bark out of his eye. "The tree is closing in upon me, man. Can you not see that I am lost unless you aid me, you —— gilly, you?"

"Ah," said Rodgers, "the wood, being porous, admits the moisture, and this expands it so that the aperture by which you entered is becoming useless as an exit. Am I right?"

"Yes, you are right; but, oh, remorse, remorse, must I perish here while you prepare an exegesis on capillary attraction and pomology? Oh, man, man, in heaven's name git a move on you, I beg!"

Rodgers laid down his dinner pail and began work at the knothole, but between whiles he got a better view of Walton and said, "Are you not Dan Walton, who lives down the gorge where the branch is where we water the teams at?"

"I am, sir, indeed," exclaimed Walton now crying piteously, "but do not lose all you have gained now by your accursed delay and loquacity. Help me, man, oh, help me, or I shall die here and possibly annoy visitors who come this way! Help me out, kind sir, whoever you may be, and I will put up a petition to heaven each night for your welfare and signed by all the property owners in California."

"Ah, but I remember you," said Rodgers; "you are the man who whipped his wife last Sabbath in such a disgraceful way and made her feel badly. I know whom you are." He then began to berate Walton with all his great command of language, cursed him and went away.

After he had gone Walton gave up all hope and broke down utterly, crying like a child and making it very wet indeed as one hot tear after another chased itself down his bronzed cheek. Then his past life rose up before him, and he saw how utterly contemptible he was in the sight of his fellows. Meaner and meaner, smaller and smaller in his own estimation he became until he was able to crawl out of the knothole, which he then done.

This is the legend of the knothole.

This knothole yet stands connected with a large tree, as I have described it, near the entrance to the park and on the left hand side going in.

The Unknown.

A fresh story of alarming adventure in a newly settled country comes from a well known Indian painter. Some years ago he was traveling in Montana. He went to the breakfast table in a mountain hotel and sat waiting for some one to take his order.

Suddenly he felt a jar and then a heavy weight resting on his shoulders. He looked around and found leaning upon and over him a huge, bearded man, in a broad brimmed hat and with two revolvers sticking in his belt.

"Well, old feller, wha'll yo have?" said the man.

"Who are you?" asked the artist in dismay.

"Me?" said the man. "I'm the waiter."—Youth's Companion.

SQUIRREL HUNTING.

THE SEASON ABOUT TO BEGIN IN THE SOUTHWEST.

Natural History of a Cunning Little Rodent—How the Fox Differs From the Gray—Sneak and Stalk Shooting—A Few Hunting Requisites.

[Special Correspondence.]

MEXICO, Mo., April 27.—Squirrel hunting in the southwest is not what it once was. The destruction of our forests is telling here as elsewhere. The two kinds of game found in the middle Mississippi valley are the western fox squirrel and the gray, but the latter, for the reasons mentioned, is rapidly receding. He is a lover of tall timber—a dweller in high holes. Here his young are reared. The gray is universally distributed east of the plains and in many regions has a tendency to black specimens much stronger than in others.

The hunter is apt to regard the black as a distinct species, but the naturalist asserts that they are simply pelage varieties, which may occur in the same litter with their gray brothers, and that black parents may likewise produce gray progeny. At times, too, the gray squirrel will show much rusty coloring on some parts, which has caused many to regard them as hybrids with the fox squirrel, but such is not the case, for the gray has this ferruginous tendency also in its variations.

The fox squirrel found west of the Alleghanies pervades the Mississippi valley broadly till it merges into the habitat of the southern fox squirrel, which is confined closely to the coast. Casually these are all distinguished from the grays by being reddish underneath, while all varieties of the gray are white below. The foxes, too, all have their dusky varieties, and especially our western species, but the reddish bones readily distinguish them in all states of pelage. These also have only four permanent molar teeth, while the grays have five.

The coloring of the bones in the rusty species is believed by many to be not necessarily inherent, but to depend upon some form of food which the gray kinds do not consume. This view of it opens up a new field of study, gives a new problem to the naturalist. It is well known that if the parent canary is fed on certain food the color of the young is affected. Crows that eat polkberries have their bones colored red, and hogs—especially white hogs—have their bones similarly colored by roots containing pigment. So "some mute, inglorious" naturalist may yet make himself a name by discovering what it is that the fox squirrel colors his bones with, if it should be a matter of feeding.

The fox squirrel is more inclined to stay with us than the gray. He is of a more domestic nature, stands the encroachments of civilization better and likes now and then to steal an ear from the fencerail cornpen of the improvident western farmer. He is content, too, with lower timber, builds his home in the short, scrubby snags of the post oak ridges and occasionally cradles his young in a leafy hammock when holes are scarce. The cultivation of the rich bottoms does not so much affect him. While the gray may be said to never dine—feeding only early and late—the fox may be abroad well into "the heat of the day."

He has another habit that renders him perhaps better able to take care of himself—he is a great believer in and provider of a place of refuge and generally goes to it when he starts, while the gray shows stronger tendency to take any tree if pushed a little, depending more upon concealment. The other is not so well color protected against the bark. Our grays hibernate during severe spells and lay up stores in their winter couch, while our "fox" is abroad nearly all the time and buries his nut or acorn in the ground only in the fall, and with wonderful localizing capacity he can return and dig it up from beneath the snow.

Our hunting season may be said to begin in May and end with December. The young "foxes" born, many of them in February, are often "ripe" on the elm bough before its leaf buds are fully expanded, but the gray is later—scarcely ready for the frying pan before May 15. Hunting young squirrels is scarcely a sportsmanlike proceeding and by no means has a tendency to the game's preservation, but the demands of the platter and palate largely subdue the qualms of conscience. The sport now is a cautious sneak, with a knowledge of all the breeding trees of the region. Later, when the young have left the home trees, a good squirrel dog, if not a necessity, is a luxury, though much may yet be done with a quick eye and ear and a cautious stalk.

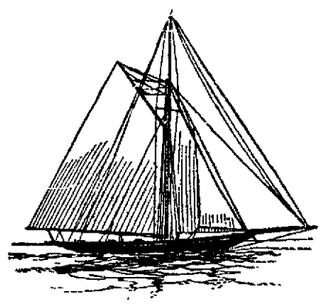
In these times the shotgun and No. 6 shot are requisite, but later in the summer and fall the small bored rifle gives fine results, especially if the game be so abundant that one can barter a little loss for a good deal of skill. Twenty-two-bores and 25-bores are now fitted with telescopic sights and do very effective work in the tallest timber. In August our squirrels haunt the hickory trees when they bear nuts and advertise their presence by the chippings beneath. Later they like the redhaws, at times reddening the earth beneath, or run the zigzag fences, carrying a milky ear of corn to the home tree, till the frosts ripen the astringency out of the acorn and food is found anywhere.

JAMES NEWTON BASKETT.

SHE WILL RACE BRITISH YACHTS.

The Navahoe and Her Proposed Races on the Other Side.

Next to the two contestants for the America's cup in September or October the big yacht Navahoe will attract more attention this year than any other yacht that sails on this or the opposite side of the Atlantic. The Navahoe is owned by Royal Phelps Carroll, who has entered her for the Royal Victoria cup and will endeavor to recapture the Brenton Reef and Cape May cups, which were taken to England by the Genesta in 1885. The boat will also sail for such other cups as may be offered during her stay on the other side.



THE YACHT NAVAHOE.

The Cape May and Brenton's Reef cups were presented to the New York Yacht club in 1872 as prizes for such ocean races as were suitable for the large schooners then in the majority. The Irex, now called the Mabel, won the Brenton's Reef cup in 1886, and although she has changed ownership several times she is still supposed to be in possession of the trophy. The steel yawl Wendur, now called the Viking, at present holds the Cape May cup. The Viking is owned by the Earl of Caledon. The Mabel is the property of M. A. Muir of the Royal Clyde Yacht club.

The Navahoe was designed by Nat G. Herreshoff and has a sail plan of about 12,000 square feet. Her length over all is 128 feet, her extreme beam 23 feet and her extreme draft 12½ feet. The Navahoe did not behave very well on her initial trial trip recently, but it is believed that she will be very swift when she carries her centerboard and proper ballast.

Outfielder Jesse Burkett.

One of the greatest batters and run getters of last season was Jesse C. Burkett of the Cleveland club, who is now playing his second season with that well known baseball organization. Burkett is a native of West Virginia, and was born in Wheeling 25 years ago. His first professional engagement was with the Scranton (Pa.) club as pitcher in 1888. The following year he materially assisted the Worcester (Mass.) club in winning the pennant of the Atlantic association, and his able work in the box led the Indianapolis club to purchase his release. As a result of later negotiations between the Indianapolis and New York clubs, Burkett and his fellow players were released to New York.

JESSE C. BURKETT.

After pitching 14 games for the Giants, Burkett abandoned the box and was one of the stars of the club's outfield in 90 championship games that season and one of its heaviest batters. From New York Burkett went to the Lincoln club of the Western league, and in August, 1891, he joined the Cleveland club. As pitcher, batter, left fielder and base runner Burkett ranks very high on the diamond.

Not a World's Fair Event.

The directors of the World's fair have concluded not to give official sanction to the sports and cycle races to be held during the fair. The league, among other governing athletic bodies, some time ago asked the directors to sanction the meet and give an exposition medal, but it is thought that if they should do so it would bring a flood of similar applications.

THE RAJAH'S RUBY

BY J. G. BETHUNE.

COPYRIGHT BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION, 1898

CHAPTER XX.

NONE OF THAT LITTLE PARTY EVER SAW HIS FACE AGAIN.

"That man there is a scoundrel."

"Mr. Fairchild left orders that the package was to be given to him only," said the clerk, glancing hesitatingly at the letter in his hand and into the face of the East Indian.

The latter replied courteously and in good English:

"Very true, as he explained to me, but he is with a party up town to whom he is anxious to show the article; two of his friends leave by the steamer tomorrow and wish to have a look at the diamond before they go. Mr. Fairchild was about to call a cab to drive down here to get it, and they offered to accompany him, but that was inconvenient since they are so pleasantly placed. Besides they have a number of lady friends with them, and it would be hardly proper for them to come here."

"Did Mr. Fairchild say nothing about any difficulty you were likely to have in securing this diamond?"

Inasmuch as the discussion was concerning the rajah's ruby, it struck Simpson as singular that Wichman should refer to it as a diamond, but the officer held his peace.

"Yes, it was that fact that caused him to hesitate, but several gentlemen assured him that a written order was all that was needed, and two or three of us volunteered to come and get it. I respect your scruples, but there is his request. You may not be familiar with his handwriting, but you can compare his signature with the one in your register and decide as you think best."

The clerk had already compared the two, but he did so again. He was embarrassed as to what he ought to do. An expert in writing would have sworn that the same hand had written both, and yet Folsom Simpson knew that the signature to the letter held by the clerk was a forgery, though a wonderfully skillful one.

"Well, I suppose it is all right," remarked the official after a little more parleying.

"If you have any misgivings," continued the East Indian in his broken language, "I will return to Mr. Fairchild and his friends, but it will be a great disappointment to them, and I am sure Mr. Fairchild will be offended."

Wichman was marvelously clever in his diplomacy. He saw that he had carried his point, and it was wise to assume the position he did.

The clerk turned to the safe with the intention of handing out the valuable package. Of course he had noticed the man standing a few paces back, but Wichman was so engaged that he did not observe that a person was behind him.

This same individual now decided that it would not do for him to defer action any longer.

"I beg your pardon, but before doing anything will you please read this?"

As Simpson spoke he handed a twist of paper from his notebook to the clerk. The latter glanced inquiringly at him and then read the slip, on which was hastily traced the following:

"This man is a scoundrel. The order which you hold in your hand is a forgery. Don't deliver him the package."

This certainly was enough to make the recipient open his eyes. He stood for a minute looking at the penciled words and then stared at the man who had written them.

The appearance of the latter was not prepossessing. His clothing was disarranged, and his hat especially looked as if it had been "through the mill and ground." Despite the detective's usual coolness, too, his face was flushed from his recent excitement.

"Who are you?" abruptly asked the hotel man.

"One who knows what he tells you. Disregard what I have said, and you will pay heavily for the consequences."

Wichman must have recognized the officer the moment he stepped forward, and he must have understood, too, that he was trying to prevent the delivery of the package into his hands.

"Will you allow an intoxicated person to interfere with a gentleman?"

Simpson, even in his anger, could not help admiring the cleverness of the fellow. He did not show the least agitation, except perhaps to the extent of looking surprised that such a well informed clerk should give heed to a man under the influence of liquor. He cast a supercilious glance at the officer and then showed himself triflingly impatient at the mistaken courtesy of the employee.

It was plain that Simpson had not made a good impression, and the clerk was more disquieted than ever. While, on the one hand, he did not wish to offend a guest, he was disposed to refer the question to his superiors before complying with it.

There was still danger, and the detective was uneasy.

"I repeat what I wrote on that paper—that man there is a scoundrel. I will add more—he has come all the way from Calcutta, accompanied by as thorough a villain as himself, to steal a gem known as the rajah's ruby, and which is worth a good many thousand dollars. That ruby is in the package which Mr. Fairchild left with you for safe keeping. These two rogues, baffled in all their attempts heretofore, have now resorted to forgery to obtain the gem, and it looks, too, as if they would have succeeded had I been a few minutes later in reaching here."

While the clerk was impressed by the pointed words of Simpson, he was not yet fully satisfied regarding him. The battered hat was a big obstacle in the way of confidence.

"How comes it that you know so much about this business? You have not yet told us who you are."

"Nor do I admit my obligation to do so. He knows who I am."

The detective jerked the top of his cane toward Wichman and added:

"I am responsible for what I say."

The matchless Asiatic remained as cool as an iceberg. With inimitable contempt he responded:

"This is the first time I have had the misfortune to look upon your face. Had I been aware that this hotel permits intoxicated persons to insult guests I would go elsewhere. The knowledge certainly is worth acquiring."

Could this be the native of Hindostan, dressed so like an exquisite and talking after the manner of an educated, high bred gentleman? Folsom Simpson was almost tempted to doubt his senses, but his bedrock common sense told him there was no mistake. Observing the hesitation of the clerk, he added:

"I see you are in doubt. Under the circumstances there is but one safe course for you to take—give yourself the benefit of the doubt and hold the package until the return of Mr. Fairchild. Suppose that by doing so you offend him? The offense is not serious, and I will guarantee that he will hold no ill will against you."

"You will guarantee it," repeated the clerk, with a fine touch of sarcasm, "and yet you do not condescend to tell me who you are."

"Well, do as you please," replied Simpson, beginning to lose patience, "but if you choose to assist this forger I will see that you receive your deserts. If you wish it, I will convince you that he has been falsifying while standing here talking to you."

"Instead of boasting so much," interposed Wichman, who realized that the crisis had come, "do what you proclaim yourself able to do."

"Very well. You have referred to the package as containing a diamond. I assert that there is no diamond in it. On the contrary, it holds a ruby of rare size and fabulous value."

"Does the gentleman consent that that shall be the test?" coolly asked Wichman of the clerk.

"I won't promise, but that strikes me as a fair proposal," replied the latter.

"I will agree to it," said Simpson. "Open the package in our presence and decide."

The clerk turned to the immense safe, and after some careful fumbling brought forth the small package wrapped in brown paper.

"Can it be I have made another blunder?" the detective asked himself. "Why is this fellow so confident? Is he only bluffing, or is there something back of this which as yet I have not fathomed?"

The young man behind the desk began gently unwrapping the paper, while the couple watched him intently, as did two other gentlemen—new arrivals—with less curiosity.

Simpson's heart almost stopped beating when he caught the unmistakable sparkle of a pure white diamond.

The clerk hastily wrapped the paper around the inclosing cotton and returned the package to its place in the safe.

"I have accepted the test of this person," said Wichman, with the same imperturbable coolness, "and will leave it to the gentleman to decide who has won."

Simpson remained dumb. This was another instance in which he felt unable to do justice to the occasion.

But a fourth party arrived on the scene. He was one much higher in authority than the clerk. As he stepped forward he glanced keenly at the disputants in front of the desk and smiled and nodded at Simpson.

"Hello!" he called, with a laugh, "was that hat won on the last election?"

"There was nothing the matter with it until it fell under a horse's heels and was trampled on."

"I understand—I understand," said the gentleman, with a significant shrug of the shoulders. "I'm not saying anything; but," he added more gravely, "it looks to me as if there had been some argument here."

There could be no doubt that Folsom Simpson and this person were old acquaintances. The fact was the detective had done work for him more than once.

The clerk was vastly relieved to have the embarrassing load lifted from his shoulders. He quickly explained the situation. His superior listened gravely and then nodded to Simpson to approach.

"How is this, Fol?"

The detective made everything clear in as few words as possible.

"This is an extraordinary story indeed! John," he added, turning to his clerk, "you came near committing an unpardonable error. You must never take any such chances, for it would prove a costly piece of stupidity on your part. I am astonished that you should have considered it for a moment. I don't blame you for looking upon him with suspicion, for that hat ought to rule him out of civilized society. As for this other individual—bless me! where is he?"

Wichman, the East Indian, had fled, and none of that little party ever saw his face again.

CHAPTER XXI.

"LISTEN, THEREFORE!"

Detective Simpson and his old friend conversed for some time, speaking in such low tones that not even the clerk, whose curiosity was aroused, could overhear what was said. Then some arrivals diverted the attention of the hotel man, and Simpson strolled out.

Making his way to the cigar stand he purchased a couple of perfectos and was sauntering away again when he found himself face to face with Arthur Fairchild, just returned from witnessing the "Old Homestead."

"The very gentleman I want to see!" exclaimed the officer.

The young man had walked down from Fourteenth street, and his face was aglow with health. He looked inquiringly at the detective, who added:

"I am the gentleman who sat behind you in the smoking car from Warhampton this afternoon, and if you can spare a few minutes I will be obliged for a short conversation with you."

"With pleasure," said Fairchild, leading the way to a corner, where they were beyond the reach of eavesdroppers. Then, when both cigars were in full blast, the officer told his story.

"I am Folsom Simpson, a detective in the employ of the well known —— agency of this city. Something less than a fortnight ago Dr. Maidhoff of Ellenville, Conn., wrote to us asking that we send a man to that town to investigate the robbery of Miss Livermore, who was the owner of a valuable gem known as the rajah's ruby. Chief Varick dispatched an officer who picked up a few points, but the doctor, instead of giving the aid that we had a right to expect, interposed every obstacle he could."

"What reason have you for that assertion?" asked Fairchild severely.

"You will not question it when you learn all that I know. Be that as it may, our man withdrew, and I took charge of the case."

"And pushed it to success, I presume?" was the inquiring comment of his listener.

"Fairly so. Let me enumerate some of the facts which came to my knowledge. In the first place, Dr. Maidhoff received from Miss Livermore a letter sent her from Calcutta, warning her that two sepoys or Thugs would soon leave that country for Ellenville for the purpose of securing the rajah's ruby, a gem of great value, and which had been in the possession of her family for a couple of centuries or more."

"That is quite correct," observed the young man, who doubtless knew that the physician had imparted that much to the detective.

"Now, these East Indians happened to arrive in Ellenville on the same day that the letter reached there. Dr. Maidhoff was indignant when he was justly questioned as to why, on learning that a burglary of the Livermore homestead was impending, he did not place guards in the house instead of submitting Miss Livermore to a shock which some people believe was the cause of her death."

"I do not understand the meaning of that remark."

"I say some people believe that the shock caused her death, when the fact is that Miss Livermore is alive at this hour."

"I hope you understand the language you are using, sir."

"Most certainly I do. I do not think that even you will deny that Miss Livermore is now at her home in Warhampton, with her niece, Miss Evelyn Gilder, to whom you are engaged for marriage."

Arthur Fairchild did not deny it. On the contrary, he compressed his lips and held his peace until, observing the hesitation of the officer, he quietly said:

"I am listening."

"The sepoys or Thugs committed the burglary as they planned, and believed for a time that they had secured the real rajah's ruby, whereas that which they obtained was nothing but a piece of colored glass, intended to serve the very purpose that it did serve. They started on their way home with the supposed prize, but had not gone far when they discovered the trick that had been played on them. They returned to renew their attempt to secure it, or to be revenged on Dr. Maidhoff."

"Revenged for what?" sharply interrupted Fairchild.

"For outwitting them—one of the strongest motives that such persons can have. They lurked in the neighborhood of the Livermore homestead and doubtless discovered the truth."

"What do you mean by the 'truth?'"

"That the rajah's ruby was in the possession of the doctor, or rather of him and yourself, for on a certain night not long ago you sat with him in the upper room of the house with the lamp burning on the table, while you discussed what should be done with the gem, meanwhile passing it back and forth between you. I do not think you will deny that."

"I have not done so."

"If you wish to know why I am so certain about it, I reply that I saw you thus engaged."

Arthur Fairchild turned and stared at the detective as if he would look him through. The only response he made was:

"I am listening; go on."

"The warning which I gave Martha, the servant girl, put you and the doctor on your guard, so that the two scoundrels, prowling on the outside, dared not attack you. You and the doctor agreed that the best course was for you to bring the ruby to New York, and you did so today."

"How can you know that?"

"You carried it wrapped in raw cotton and brown paper, and placed it on the inside of your vest on the left side. As soon as you reached the Astor House you gave it to the clerk, who deposited it in the safe, and you imagine that it is still there."

Fairchild bounded to his feet.

"Has it been stolen?" he gasped.

"Keep cool; it is still there, though but for me it would have been gone beyond all possibility of recovery by you or any one else."

"You take away my breath. I don't know what to think."

"In the same car with you from Warhampton rode a dark skinned person dressed in the height of fashion. He sat on the opposite side and a few seats from you."

"I recall him, though I gave him no particular attention."

"Nevertheless he bestowed particular attention on you, for he, too, knew that you carried the rajah's ruby, and he was ready to take desperate chances to get it. Had you gone out this evening carrying it with you, you would have been assaulted somewhere in the city and robbed. But you left it in the safe at the hotel and spent the evening enjoying the "Old Homestead." While you were there this same East Indian or sepoy or Thug presented himself at the Astor House with an order for the package purporting to be signed by you. Your signature was executed with such skill that the clerk had scarcely a doubt that it was genuine."

"Then why did he not deliver the package? Do you tell me he did not?"

"He was about to do so when fortunately I arrived and managed to prevent it."

"This sounds incredible, but I do not doubt you. How extraordinarily things have come about!"

"The clerk went so far as to open the parcel—that is, partially, so as to show a diamond instead of a ruby."

"Had he fully opened it he would have found two large diamonds and the rajah's ruby. My dear sir, I appreciate the inestimable service you have done to me and to others dear to me. I do not know that I shall ever be able to repay you."

"I can tell you how," said Simpson, with a smile.

"Let me know, and I will be only too glad to do so."

"Tell me the true story of the rajah's ruby."

Arthur Fairchild was silent for a minute or two. He was debating some question with himself.

"If you knew less," he finally said, "I would tell you no more, but you have proved that you know so much that I cannot refuse you, for doubtless the whole truth would be unearthed by you. Besides," he added heartily, "the service you have rendered me entitles you to what you ask. Listen, therefore, and you shall hear the story of the rajah's ruby."

CHAPTER XXII.

THE STORY OF THE RAJAH'S RUBY.

As has already been stated, the wonderful gem known as the rajah's ruby first came into prominence more than 200 years ago. Like all minerals, its age is beyond computation, but it is enough for present purposes to say that when it was carried to England by the doughty soldier whose title to its ownership it is not best to inquire into too particularly he took with it a series of superstitions that would have been incredible in these later days.

But the period named was that in which the belief in witchcraft was general, and the clergy as well as the laity cherished fancies and beliefs at which our children would laugh.

With the ruby was inclosed a writing on parchment, first engrossed in Sanscrit and afterward translated into English, to the effect that the owner of the rajah's ruby could retain possession of it only by obeying certain requirements.

First of all, he must always keep it in his possession—that is, he must never deposit it in the custody of another nor anywhere except beneath his own roof. He could take it with him if he chose while journeying, but he must retain his guardianship over it. Thus the best course at his command was to place it in a strong safe in his own dwelling. That was precisely what was done by Miss Livermore, its last owner.

The invention of the false gem was an idea of old Captain Ashleigh, who served Great Britain during our Revolution. The real jewel was kept in a secret drawer in the safe, while the counterfeit was left where a burglar, after once obtaining entrance, was sure to find it.

The early British owners of the ruby were in constant dread of a visit of emissaries from India. Overtures were made several times from different rajahs of that country for its purchase, but they were rejected, since another legend connected with the gem was that whosoever parted with it for money would speedily meet with violent death.

Two attempts were made to steal it, but the vigilance of its possessors prevented success, and shortly after the close of our war for independence the ruby was brought to this country by the grandfather of Miss Livermore. When it was left to her, she inherited with it the strange myths and fancies as well as the false gem, whose purpose she fully understood.

While she shared to some extent this singular belief attaching to this jewel, she was a lady of education and deep religious convictions. She wished to cast off the chain, though not wholly able to do so. There can be no doubt that her mental torment over its possession induced a state of nervousness which eventually reduced her to the condition of an invalid.

Thus matters stood when Dr. Maidhoff, her family physician, learned the whole truth. He was a man of strong mind and had no patience with bigotry and superstition. This led him to use his utmost influence to persuade her to disregard all the absurd injunctions she had received with the heirloom.

"It has been a curse to every one that had anything to do with it," he said. Sell it for the comfortable fortune it will bring and get rid of the pest."

"But, doctor, you know the penalty," she said, with a smile in which there was no mirth.

"Fangh! You do not believe any such rubbish."

"No—that is, I try not to believe it and do not. Yet when I contemplate the step I shrink with a dread that I suppose is mostly due to my poor health."

"Undoubtedly, and why, therefore, pay any heed to it?"

"I wish it had never been left to me. If I could will it to you or any one else, I would do so."

"I don't want it, but I want you to get well, which you will never do as long as you remain morbid over that. I shall give you no rest until the thing is sold and off your mind."

A third injunction, coming down from former generations, was that the owner of the rajah's ruby must never give it away or will it to another until such an act was among the last of his or her life—that is to say, while Miss Livermore was at liberty to designate by will the next owner of the gem, that owner could not receive it until the former's death. Thus, as long as the injunction was heeded, Miss Livermore must remain tied to it, for such virtually was her situation.

While the good lady was in this state of incertitude and distress, Dr. Maidhoff received two valuable allies in the persons of the niece, Miss Gilder, and her betrothed, Arthur Fairchild. They ridiculed her weakness with such success that she was forced to the deciding point.

"I will sell it and take the chances. Heaven will not permit any harm to come to me for such an innocent deed."

It was at this juncture, while Miss Gilder was absent among her friends and Fairchild was in another section on business, that the alarming letter arrived from India, written by a person unknown to them, but who Miss Livermore instinctively felt was a friend. She sent for Dr. Maidhoff and gave him the letter. He read it through and was so angered that he tore the missive in two and flung one portion in the grate. Then, feeling that he had been too hasty, he picked up the larger part, replaced it in the envelope and shoved it into his pocket.

His first impression was that this was an attempt to terrify his patient into parting with the ruby, and he was indignant to observe that its reception had thrown her into a deplorable state. But, reasoning more clearly, he decided before the close of the day that it would be criminal on his part to disregard the warning. He did not expect the coming of the East Indians, if they came at all, for some days or weeks, and, despite the fact that they did reach Ellenville by a strange coincidence almost at the same hour as the letter, he was unaware of it.

He had allowed Detectives Manson and Simpson to believe that he knew this, and therefore was guilty of a carelessness which laid him open to suspicion, but he was called out in the country that evening and had no knowledge of what occurred until the following morning, when Martha, the servant, came in great haste for him.

He found Miss Livermore in a sad condition and in danger of death. The burglar had appeared at her bedside just as was stated and compelled her to give the combination which opened the safe. The criminal departed with the false instead of the true gem.

The effect of this midnight visit upon the doctor was more unaccountable than upon the woman. It convinced him of the utter unscrupulousness of the men that had come across the sea to secure the rajah's ruby. He was sure that, although they had been deceived by the colored glass, they would soon return to recover it and probably revenge themselves upon the woman that had deceived them.

Cases are not lacking where the bravest men have broken down, become "rattled," as the expression goes, and figuratively gone to pieces under a long continued nervous and mental strain. Major Chorpenning, who made the wonderful ride alone from Salt Lake City to Sacramento with the United States mail, more than 30 years ago, has related to us a similar experience. He passed the dead bodies of the five men of the previous train, all of whom had been massacred by Indians, and coolly gathering the mutilated remains gave them the best burial possible. He did this without a tremor of the nerves, though he knew he had reached the most dangerous portion of the route and saw at that time the smoke from the signal fires of the red men who were waiting a short distance ahead to ambush and kill him.

The brave fellow rode straight on with his two mules, on the alert for danger. He passed safely through, but late that night, when alone in the desolate solitude, broke down and wept like a child. His nerve left him, and for two hours he was in a state of absolute collapse. Then his courage revived, and he pushed on.

When Dr. Maidhoff learned the truth about the Sepoys, he was affected in much the same way, though he repressed all evidence of it. He became panic stricken and did that which none would have been quicker than himself to condemn at another time. The coma into which Miss Livermore sank suggested the pretense of giving out that she had really died.

"Those dusky fiends will learn of it," was his thought, "and they will be so terrified that they will hasten out of the country and never annoy us again, even though there be 100 rajahs's rubies to steal. Miss Livermore's condition is so much like death that no eye besides the professional one can know that it is a case of suspended animation. When we reach Warhampton, she will revive—that is, probably she will, for she is in a sad state and is by no means certain of recovery. We will keep her in seclusion and then let her be seen at the end of a couple of weeks or so. No one will question my course, as they might do if I persisted in declaring her dead after she had come to herself again."

It will be admitted that there was considerable ingenuity in the scheme, and but for the mistake the physician made in calling in the aid of the detectives the truth would probably have remained a secret within a very narrow circle. But we repeat, except that he lost his head completely for the time, and for the opportune coma of the lady, Dr. Maidhoff would never have conceived the plan, which he condemned as soon as he had gone just too far to recede, without placing himself in a most peculiar position.

He summoned Arthur Fairchild and Evelyn Gilder to his assistance. They were dumfounded at his blunder, but since he himself admitted it they agreed, out of consideration for him, to keep the matter a profound secret until the jewel was disposed of. Then it could be stated that Miss Livermore, on being taken to Warhampton, showed signs of returning vitality and eventually regained her health. The story would be a sensational one, but the physician's well established reputation would avert all suspicion from him.

The doctor had sent to Chief Varick while flustered over the burglary and uncertain what he ought to do. He regretted his course, but it was too late to recall it. It was believed that it would be easy to mislead the detectives, and many ingenious attempts were made to do so; but, as has been shown, the friends in this instance reckoned without their host.

But Miss Livermore gave way under the combined persuasion of the doctor, and her niece, and the latter's betrothed. Miss Gilder was anxious to have the business adjusted and the suspense ended. She dreaded more than any one else the work of the detectives. She was convinced that the act of Dr. Maidhoff, if brought to light, was likely to result seriously to him and would gravely compromise all.

It was this conviction, shared by her aunt, that led the latter to surrender the ruby to the physician and Fairchild with full permission to sell it.

The doctor received so many callers at his house and office that he was afraid of holding the various councils of war there. As the place most likely to be free from interruption, he went to the Livermore homestead, where certainly there was no cause to look for visitors.

Meanwhile Miss Gilder became convinced that one or both of the East Indians were in the neighborhood and that mischief was brewing. She became more nervous than her aunt had been. The story brought thither by Martha almost prostrated her, and even when she remained at the doctor's office she required him to signal to her that all was right.

In truth, as the reader has learned, the young lady had a truer conception of the situation than any of her friends, who were in actual danger from the Thugs from India.

During all this time Dr. Maidhoff carried the rajah's ruby with him while making his professional rounds. He had recovered his usual pluck and insisted that this was the safest course, since no one would suspect him of lugging any surplus wealth about with him.

Ah, if Wichman and Lugro had but known that the gig of the physician, as it bobbed around the country, carried the matchless gem which had brought them thousands of miles across land and sea, they would have assailed him with the stealthy ferocity of their own jungle tigers and despoiled him of its possession.

Arthur Fairchild wished to go to New York at once with the ruby, but his betrothed was in that timid, apprehensive state that she would not permit it for several days. Finally she gave her consent, believing the coast was clear. Little would she have slept during his absence had she known that one of the dreaded sepoys rode in the same car with him all the way to the metropolis, and that both were shadowing the unsuspecting young man.

Regarding Wichman and Lugro, they doubtless gave up the attempt to recover the rajah's ruby after the defeat of their last effort. Their fitness for the extraordinary part they played was proved by the consummate skill with which they prepared the letter, when the only specimen of Fairchild's writing obtainable was his signature on the register of the Astor House. They probably returned to India with little delay, for their deeds laid them open to prosecution, and they had nothing to gain and much to risk by remaining in this country.

The rajah's ruby was sold for a round sum to one of the leading jewelers in New York city, while the large diamonds formed part of the ornaments worn by Miss Gilder at her wedding, which took place a few months later.

The remarkable gem from India, we believe, found its way back to England, where it was finally settled in the possession of one of the titled families, from whom it could not be purchased for the price of a kingdom.

Miss Antoinette Livermore was rid of the gem and pest at last. Despite the horrible evils that were threatened to any owner who parted with it as she had done, nothing of the kind has as yet befallen her. On the contrary, her health has steadily improved until today she is certain that she is better physically than she has been for many years.

The moral of which is that we who are not the owners of wonderful diamonds, rubies, pearls and precious stones should congratulate ourselves rather than envy those who are burdened with their possession.

THE END.

Liszt's Influence.

The influence of Liszt on the destiny of the piano was immense. I can best compare it with the revolution brought about by Victor Hugo in the mechanism of the French language. This influence was more powerful than that of Paganini in the world of the violin, because Paganini dwelt always in an inaccessible region where he alone could live, while Liszt, starting from the same point, deigned to descend into the practical paths where any one could follow who would take the trouble to work seriously. To play like him on the piano would be impossible. As Olga Janina said in her strange book, his fingers were not human fingers, but nothing is easier than to follow the course he marked out, and in fact every one does follow it whether he knows it or not. The great development of sonority of tone, with the means of obtaining it, which he invented, has become the indispensable condition and very foundation of modern execution.—Century.

Where It Was.

Jack—Seen my tobacco pouch anywhere, Dora?

Dora—Oh, don't say you want it. I've just done it up in my back hair as a pad.—Slopers.

Answered.

Teacher—Now give me a French noun admitting of a diminutive suffix, such as table, tablette.

Pupil—Homme, omelette.—Fliegende Blatter.

RHEUMATISM PREVALENT.

Caused by the Sudden Changes of Temperature.

PEOPLE WHO HAVE FOUND RELIEF.

Rheumatism is more prevalent here than ever before.

When this disease fastens upon an individual with its soreness and pain, swelling the joints, rendering him helpless in his movements, and shattering his usefulness, he is indeed an object of pity.

The slight pain in the back, pain or stiffness of the joints or muscles, is a warning indication of an improvished condition of the blood, a low state of health, and if not attended to at once, means rheumatism.

Rheumatism can now be relieved and cured.

Since the introduction of Favorite Remedy, by Dr. David Kennedy, of Roudout, N. Y., there has been fewer sufferers than ever before.

Favorite Remedy drives out rheumatic poison from the blood, restores the circulation, strengthens the nerve power.

The best proof of its value is the good it has done.

"I was afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism for fifteen years, writes Mr. E. P. Tayer, of East Nassau, N. Y. So severe that I was supposed to be a cripple for life. Under physicians treatment I grew worse. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy helped me from the time I first used it, and entirely cured me. Have felt no trace of the disease since, and that was three years ago."

The beautiful daughter of Mr. James Mc Farland, of DeMoines, Ia., was helpless for months with sciatic rheumatism. After a few doses of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, she began to grow better, appetite improved, slept well, and continuing its use, was cured.

"I was confined to my bed with rheumatism near my heart, writes Mr. C. L. Seaver, of Birmingham, Conn., and used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy but a short while before it drove the rheumatism out of my system."

Mr. G. Lansing of Troy, N. Y., had rheumatism so bad that he had to be turned over in bed. After using Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy but a short while was restored to health.

What reason then for suffering with rheumatism or neuralgia. This medicine will help you if given a trial.

WORLD'S FAIR OPENED.

A Brilliant Scene at the White City in Chicago.

Immediately an Engine Started the Machinery and the Exhibition Had Commenced—The President and Duke of Veragua Guests of Honor.

CHICAGO, May 1.—President Cleveland has pressed the button. The engine has started. The water has burst into the tremendous fountains. A thousand flags released are flapping. The White City is teeming with many thousands. The World's fair has opened and is ready for visitors.

The sun rose this morning and, peeping through a rift in the clouds, saw a gorgeous spectacle—Chicago and the White City profuse in yards of bunting,

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND SETTING THE MACHINERY IN MOTION.

The president and the Duke of Veragua and the members of their party were early risers and were prepared for leaving for Jackson park when the escort arrived. The escorting party was composed as follows:

Platoon of mounted park police.
Twenty-seven mounted police under the command of Lieutenant Healy.
Company B, Seventh U. S. cavalry, under command of Captain E. A. Barnum.
Company K, Seventh U. S. cavalry, under command of Captain L. R. Hare.
Chicago Hussars, under command of Major E. L. Brand.
First and Second regiments, I. N. G.
First five carriages, commissioners and escort.
Sixth carriage, the director general of the exposition, the director of works.
Seventh carriage, the president of the United States, the president of the World's Columbian commission, the president of the World's Columbian exposition.
Eighth carriage, vice president of the United States, ex-President Lyman J. Gage, ex-President William T. Baker.
Ninth carriage, secretary of state and escort.
Tenth carriage, secretary of the treasury and escort.
Eleventh carriage, secretary of the navy and escort.
Twelfth carriage, secretary of interior and escort.
Thirteenth carriage, secretary of agriculture and escort.
Fourteenth carriage, Duke of Veragua, the first vice president of the commission, the first vice president of the exposition, Commander Dickens.
Fifteenth carriage, Duchess of Veragua, Mrs. Palmer, president of the board of lady managers of the World's Columbian exposition, Mrs. Commander Dickens.
Sixteenth carriage, Marquis de Barboles, second vice president of the commission, second vice president of the exposition.
Seventeenth carriage, the Hon. Christobel Colon Y. Aguilera, the Hon. Maria Del Pilar Colon Y. Aguilera Commissioner Thomas G. Gutierrez.
Eighteenth carriage, the Hon. Pedro Colon Y. Bertenado, the Hon. Carlos Aguilera, Marquis Villalobar, Director Charles L. Hutchinson.
Nineteenth carriage, Thomas F. Bayard, Lambert Tree.
Twentieth carriage, major general commanding United States army and aides.
Twenty-first carriage, Admiral Gherardi and aides.
Twenty-second carriage, governor of the state of Illinois.
Twenty-third carriage, mayor of the city of Chicago.

After leaving the Hotel Lexington and the Auditorium hotel, the parade moved south on Michigan avenue from the Auditorium to Fifty-first street, through Baird avenue to Palmer avenue, thence to the west entrance of Midway plaisance, where Colonel Edmund Rice of the Columbian Guards and staff were waiting. Going through the grounds the procession passed on the north side of the woman's building past the horticultural building and between the transportation and mines buildings to the west pavilion of the administration building, where the formal ceremonies occurred.

PRESIDENT PALMER OF THE WORLD'S COMMISSION ANNOUNCES THE COMPLETION OF THE BUILDINGS AND HIGH ACCEPTANCE FROM THE OFFICERS OF THE EXPOSITION

As the party entered the building and took their seats on the platform, it seemed that the very roof would be raised by the continuous bursts of applause that followed. President Cleveland and the Duke of Veragua, as the special guests of honor, occupied the front seats on the extra honorable section of the opening day platform. The cabinet and ducal party, General Davis, President Palmer and a few others of the fair management occupied the remaining 53 chairs. There then followed 2,000 special invited guests, including the foreign commissioners, the supreme judges, the superior, circuit and county judges and one private citizen—"Buffalo Bill." The Illinois legislature was among the 2,000 elect. After President Palmer of the National commission announced the completion of the buildings and their acceptance from the officers of the exposition the following programme was observed:

Music—Chorus and orchestra.
Prayer—Rev. [illegible] M. Paret, D. D.
Poem "The Prophecy," W. A. Crofutti, Miss Jessie Booth.
Music—Chorus and orchestra.
Address—Director General Davis.
Address—President Cleveland.

Then President Cleveland turned to the button on the table in front of him. It was in the shape of a modern telegraph key and was of solid gold, with an ivory button on the handle. It sat on a pyramid of blue, gold and plush 12 inches high. The colors presented those of the American and Spanish nations. On the base of the pyramid were the figures "1492—1893" in silver. With breathless intensity the vast audience waited for the climax to come. The president, with nerveless hand and becoming dignity, pressed the button-mounted key, the engine started the myriads of wheels to turning, the yards of belting to sliding, the water burst into the immense fountains, and a thousand flags were released. Then a salute of 21 guns boomed from the steamer Andrew Johnston and vessels, steam launches, etc., took up the refrain with their sharp, keen whistles and the World's fair of 1893 had opened.

The president was then escorted to manufactures hall, where he received the commissioners of foreign countries. He then took luncheon on the grounds, given by the ceremonies committee. Afterward he was driven about the grounds in a carriage, accompanied by Director General Davis. The other members of the two parties, including the Duke of Veragua, were variously entertained during the day.

Mrs. Palmer Drove the Nail.

CHICAGO, May 1.—Mrs. Potter Palmer drove a golden nail into the woman's building at the World's fair to signify the completion of the building. In presiding at the meeting of the board of lady managers Mrs. Palmer had become expert with the gavel, and the handsome lady president was able to hit the nail on the head and drive it into the arch of the assembly room with exactly three well directed blows of the hammer.

MRS. POTTER PALMER

The exercises were simple. Mrs. Eliza Richards of Montana delivered the precious nail in its silver casket, and also a gold and silver hammer, and Mrs. Palmer thereupon proceeded with her own fair hands to finish the woman's building herself. As a matter of fact, the golden nail was immediately withdrawn and returned to its place in the breastpin, of which it forms a part, and the pin was presented to Mrs. Palmer.

The President's Opinion of the Fair.

CHICAGO, May 1.—"Grand, marvelous, incomprehensible" was the verdict of President Cleveland as expressed to President Higinbotham after his first visit to the World's fair. Mr. Cleveland went to the grounds Saturday afternoon, accompanied by Secretaries Gresham, Smith, Herbert and Carlisle and Mrs. Carlisle and Miss Herbert. The president's visit was unannounced and was strictly private. The exposition directors, headed by President Higinbotham, led the way to the administration building where a view was obtained of the lagoons and peristyle. Here it was that Mr. Cleveland said "Marvelous." Carriages were then taken and a general inspection of the buildings and grounds made. In manufactures hall the vast army of workmen greeted the president with hearty cheers and the foreigners uncovered. President Cleveland gazed in silent admiration at the stupendous sweep of roof and the giant electroliers. It was here that he said "incomprehensible." Driving at a spanking gait the various foreign structures were hastily reviewed and the greetings tendered him were the most enthusiastic. But the fair was too gigantic for details and the visit was necessarily hurried. Darkness forced the party to leave the grounds before many of the buildings could be visited.

Will Sue the Judge.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., May 1.—Harrison Reed, a farmer living north of Logansport, was to have been married last Tuesday evening to a lady living in the southern part of this county. He was caught by a deputy sheriff and made to serve on a jury, while on his way to be married. The bride refuses to have him now and he will sue the judge for damages.

Big Bank Failure in Australia.

LONDON, May 1.—A dispatch from Melbourne announces the failure of the National Bank of Australia. The bank has some 150 branches in Australia and agencies in most large cities of the United Kingdom, the continent and the United States. Its assets are now estimated at £10,000,000, its liabilities in the colonies only at £7,500,000.

A Dearth of Servant Girls.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Housekeepers and proprietors of New York employment agencies are becoming alarmed over the scarcity of servant girls in the metropolis. Both are somewhat at a loss to explain the matter, but the most general conjecture is that they are hiring out to go to the World's fair.

Four Sentenced to Death.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., May 1.—In the federal court at Ft. Smith, Judge Parker sentenced to death Marshal Tucker, John Hicks, John Gourko and Alexander Allen. The execution is to take place July 12. Tucker is a white man, formerly a deputy United States marshal. The others are Cherokee outlaws.

Lynchers Are Angry.

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 1.—A special from Denmark says that 500 citizens met there and adopted resolutions justifying the lynching of John Peterson. The resolutions also say that any man who wants to protect a rapist or punish his lynchers deserves the same fate as Peterson.

A Silk Mill Burned.

NEWBURG, N. Y., May 1.—Harrison & Gore's silk mill was burned near here. Loss, $100,000; insurance $50,000.

Arab Slaves Drowned.

LONDON, May 2.—A dispatch from Zanzibar brings news of the drowning of 120 slaves by the capsizing of an Arab dhow, in which the captives were being conveyed south of Madigascar.

A RIOT IN MARSEILLES.

May Day Celebraters Fight With the Police.

TROOPS CALLED TO QUELL IT.

Rioters Fight the Troops and the Police With Sticks and Stones—A Number of Persons Injured—The Demonstrations Mostly Peaceful in Europe.

LONDON, May 2.—Late returns from the May day labor demonstrations throughout Europe show that in the majority of the places quiet was preserved, with the exception of the celebration at Marseilles, France.

Toward evening the crowds in the streets became very disorderly. The police tried to arrest several socialists who were waving red flags and were inciting the workingmen to violence. The crowd resisted. A fight in which the police were worsted followed. Hussars were summoned to help the police and a general fight at close quarters was begun. The rioters defended themselves with clubs and stones. Several soldiers and policemen were badly cut and bruised.

M. Floyol municipal councilor, was knocked down by the charging Hussars, his clothing was torn to shreds and he was kicked and trampled under foot. He was removed in a carriage to his home.

After the first charge of the Hussars had been repulsed, a crowd of rioters captured the police commissary, knocked him down and dragged him in the dust. He was rescued by the troops before serious harm could be done him. By united effort the military and police eventually split the mob and drove off the groups of rioters.

Bands of ruffians made attacks upon isolated policemen. Every officer whom they captured was beaten, dragged in the street and half stripped of his clothes. In several districts disorderly crowds paraded.

A Collapse in Coffee.

LONDON, May 2.—The Financial News announces that the gigantic corner in coffee engineered by M. Kaltenbach, the Paris operator, has collapsed, implicating 30 firms in Havre, and a number of houses in Antwerp, Rotterdam and Hamburg. The paper adds that for 12 months M. Kaltenbach has alone been carrying 1,000,000 bags of coffee.

Decided Not to Strike.

LONDON, May 2.—The conference of federated trades which had been summoned together to take action in view of the expected strike of the union dock laborers, was not held for the reason that the executive committee of the Dockers' union stated that they had already decided not to have any strike.

Postponed Until Monday.

LONDON, May 2.—In the house of commons Mr. Gladstone announced that on account of the pressure of other business the meeting of the house, as a committee on the Irish home rule bill, would be postponed until Monday.

To Entertain the Naval Officers.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Chauncey M. Depew, president of the Central railroad, says that he is making arrangements for a special vestibuled train which would be put at the disposal of Admiral Gherardi for the purpose of allowing the visiting naval officers to visit Chicago and Niagara Falls. The train will start about the last of the week. The party will return by the way of the Michigan Central and Pennsylvania railroads, which have also offered a special train.

Lost the Appeal.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The appeal in the case of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad company against William R. McKean was dismissed by Chief Justice Fuller in the supreme court of the United States. This case grows out of the operations of Henry S. Ives in Ohio and Indiana railroad corporations several years ago which for a time dazzled the financial world.

Hurt in the Storm.

GREENSBURG, Pa., May 2.—The storm did considerable damage in this county. Buildings were unroofed at some points down the Southwest road. Two little children of Andrew Whitehead, at Tarr, were severely injured. When the storm came up they took refuge in a wagon shed and the building was blown down upon them.

Killed in a Drunken Row.

WHEELING, May 2.—A murder occurred at Benwood, a suburb of this city, the result of a drunken quarrel. The victim was Samuel McCloud and his murderers are his mother and Charles Tibes, the latter the brother-in-law of the victim. The mother clutched her son by the throat and choked him until Tibes beat his brains out with a club.

Dr. Talmage to Preach in Philadelphia.

BROOKLYN, May 2.—Dr. Talmage said in the pulpit of the tabernacle that during the week he would visit Philadelphia for the purpose of preaching on Sunday next the ordination and installation sermon of his son, who was an infant when he entered on his duties 24 years ago in the Brooklyn Tabernacle.

Denied by President Sloan.

NEW YORK, May 2.—President Samuel Sloan denies the report that the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western has secured control of the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan road.

A New Water Company.

HARRISBURG, May 2.—The Apollo Spring Water company of Pittsburg, capital $2,750, was chartered here. E. M. Hukill of Pittsburg is the principal stockholder.

Sentence on Buchanan Deferred.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Recoder Smythe announces that he will defer sentencing Buchanan, convicted of wife murder, until later in the week.

"LOOK AT THE MAP"

The Route to be Taken by Many Visitors to the World's Fair.

Almost any map of the United States shows the location of Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Louisville, and other large cities. From each of the three cities named draw a straight line to Chicago. The line drawn from Pittsburg will touch at Salem, Alliance, Canton, Massillon, Wooster, Mansfield, Crestline, Bucyrus, Lima and Van Wert O.; Ft. Wayne, Columbia City, Warsaw, Plymouth and Valparaiso, Ind. That from Cincinnati will traverse a thickly settled portion of the southwestern part of Ohio and run the entire length of Indiana from the southeast to northwest, touching at Hamilton and Eaton, O.; Richmond, Hagerstown, New Castle, Anderson, Elwood, Kokomo, Logansport, Winamac, Crown Point, Ind. The line from Louisville will pass through the entire length of the Hoosier state and in its course would touch Columbus, Franklin, Indianapolis and Logansport. A line drawn from Pittsburg through Columbus, O., to Chicago would incline slightly to the southwest and would pass through Steubenville, Cooshocton, Newark, Urbana and Piqua, O.; Union City, Hartford, Marion and Logansport, Ind., and run direct from those points to the World's Fair site. A line from Madison, Ind., would also pass through Indianapolis and Logansport in its direct course to Chicago.

Such lines placed on the map would indicate the routes to the World's Fair described by the Pennsylvania lines, which traverse the populous portions of western Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, leading direct from Pittsburg, the natural gateway from the east, and in a straight course from Cincinnati and Louisville, the natural gateways of the south, to the World's Fair City. Beginning April 25, World's Fair excursion tickets will be sold from all stations on the Pennsylvania lines. The going coupons will be valid from the day of purchase until October 30 and the return coupon will be good for return passage up to and including November 5. The sale of these tickets will be continued daily until October 30, and will be governed by consistent reductions in fare. Both going and return coupons valid for continuous passage only. See any ticket agent for informations, regarding the time of trains, etc.

The recent extensive improvements on the Pennsylvania lines make them the desirable thoroughfares to Chicago from the territory traversed by them. The first-class train service affords every desired convenience for an enjoyable trip.

DR. H. LESTER KUTCHIN,

Cure After All Others Fail

—ALL FORMS OF—

Chronic, Special, Specific and Surgical DISEASES.

DISEASES OF THE EYE AND EAR,

Tumors of the Orbit or Eyelid, Wounds, Injuries or Watering of the Eyes, Granular Lids, Scrofulous Sore Eyes, Weakness of Vision, etc., ARTIFICIAL EYES INSERTED.

Deafness, Ringing or Noise in the Ears, Polypus of Nose and Ear, Discharges Ulceration of the Tympanum, Closure of Eustachian Tubes, Abscesses, Tumors, etc.

HEAD AND THROAT

And their symptoms—such as Catarrh, Headaches, Neuralgia, Twitching of the Eyelids, Pain in the back of the Head, dropping of matter into the Throat, Sore Eyes, Discharges from and Ringing in the Ears, Sore Nose with redness, Sore Throat and Mouth, Scaly Eruptions on the Head and Face, Blotches and Pimples on the Face and Body, Hoarseness, Loss of Voice, Enlarged Tonsils, Canker in the Mouth, Bronchitis, etc., are cured with remedies that are not injurious, and months of lingering treatment are avoided. Diseases of the

LUNGS AND HEART

Are indicated by some of the following symptoms, viz.: Cough, Pains through the Chest, raising of matter, weak and tired feeling through the Chest when talking much, short, quick breath, sharp pains in the left breast, palpitation of the heart, faintness, dizziness, flushed face, night sweats, asthma, raising of blood, etc.; and are treated upon the latest scientific and common-sense principles, and frequently cures are affected after the patient has been given up to die by a dozen or more of the votaries to the CURE-ALL theory. The diseases of the

STOMACH AND LIVER,

Together with their symptoms, are numerous and distressing. They are, principally, pain through and under the shoulder-blades, sallow complexion, biliousness, depression of spirits, high colored urine, constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, tenderness over the pit of the stomach, lump in the throat, fulness of the stomach, bloating, sick headaches, drowsiness after meals, inclination to stoop when walking or sitting, belching of wind after meals, furred, dry and parched tongue, ravenous appetite, nausea, vomiting, neuralgia, raising of bile, heartburn, brown spots on face or body, pain in the side, tormenting thirst while eating, etc. Our treatment for these affections are the best in the world, and always successful. The numerous and terrible difficulties arising from diseases of the

KIDNEYS AND BLADDER,

And which principally afflict old people, are pain in the back, pain over the bladder, high-colored, scanty, profuse, muddy or milky urine, scalding, frequent desire to void it, brick-dust sediment and many other symptoms, some of which can only be detected by urinalysis chemical and microscopical examinations. Speedy relief is always given in these cases, and permanent cures affected after mineral waters, patent medicines, and cure-all doctors have nearly completed a cure by DRUGGING THE PATIENT TO DEATH.

BLOOD POISONING

Diseases, such as Scrofula, Erysipelas, Fever Sores and Syphilis, causing blotches dry or discharging ulcers, pimples, pains in the bones, sore nose, throat, mouth and tongue, scrofulous sore eyes, discharges from the ears, granular enlargements, kernels on the neck and under the jaws, ulcers on the limbs, scaly eruptions, rheumatism, catarrh, etc., etc., are cured without a single failure.

NERVOUS DISEASES,

Producing nervousness, wakefulness, great lassitude and weakness, palpitation of the heart, depression of spirits, exhaustion upon slight exercise, taking cold easily, lack of energy and ambition, weak stomach and nervous exhaustion, lost vitality, sensations as of nodding and jerking, dizziness, gloomy forebodings, despondency, lack of interest in passing events, weak or inflamed eyes, deafness, ringing in the ears, loss of memory, disordered imagination, restlessness, easily excited, blur before eyes, lack of confidence in oneself and a constant sense of impending danger, loss of vigor and vitality, obstinate constipation, pain in the back, and general derangement of the whole system.

FEMALE COMPLAINTS

Are treated by new and painless remedies, which soothes and subdues the inflammation instead of increasing it by caustics and such barbarous, inhuman, unnatural injurious applications. The bearing-down pains, backache, spinal weakness, irritability, despondency, pain in the top of the head, nervousness, soreness and bloating of the abdomen, and the general debility which accompany these symptoms, all point to uterine disease, and should receive prompt and proper treatment
